HUGHES CHOICE OF CONVENTION

INDORSED BY REPUBLICANS OF NEW YORK STATE.

DELEGATES ARE INSTRUCTED

WILL WORK FOR NOMINATION OF HUGHES AT CHICAGO.

PLATFORM STRONG DOCUMENT

Plain Statement of Position of Party on Leading Issues—Unusual Interest Attaches to It Because of Nearness to National Policies.

NEW YORK, April 11.—Governor Charles E. Hughes was indorsed as New York's Republican candidate for President by that party's state convention, held today, and the four delegates-at-large, with their alternatives, elected to the Chicago national Republican convention, were instructed to use all honorable means to bring about his nomination. The four delegates-at-large are: General Stewart L. Woodford, ex-Mayor Seth Low of this city,

SETH LOW.

Ex-Mayor of New York, One of the Delegates-at-Large, Who Will Work for Hughes at [illegible] Convention at Chicago.

Frederick R. Hazzard of Syracuse, and E. H. Butler of Buffalo.

The convention—the thirteenth held by the Republican party to elect delegates-at-large to a national convention—was a repetition in its distinctive feature of the Oneida convention of 1880, when Roscoe Conklin sought vainly to have not only the delegates-at-large, but the congressional delegates also instructed for U. S. Grant.

Ex-State Senator Edgar T. Brackett of Saratoga, president of the Hughes State league, precipitated a sharp debate by presenting a minority report from the committee on resolutions to amend the resolution indorsing Governor Hughes and to instruct the delegates-at-large to work for him and the other delegates to persistently la-

NEGROES OPPOSE TAFT

IF HE IS NOMINATED WILL VOTE FOR BRYAN.

Letter From Afro-American League of Ohio Shows Feeling of Blacks Against Roosevelt's Choice.

WASHINGTON, April 11.—A letter addressed to Representative Rainey of Illinois, by W. S. Thomas, chairman of the Ohio Afro-American league, with headquarters of the state central committee at Columbus, O., was read in the House today. Mr. Thomas, referring to a speech some time since in the House in reply to one by Mr. Rainey, declared that the negroes of Ohio refused to be led like cattle driven to the voting booths and there cast their ballots for President Roosevelt, his secretary of war or any man he may select at the Republican [illegible] of the United States at Chicago."

The letter points out that grave injustice was rendered the negro race by the discharge of the companies of the Twenty-fifth infantry and states that negroes of the country will support no candidate for President who does not stand squarely upon the broad principles of justice.

In conclusion the letter [illegible]:

"We have come to that point where we can say thank God for Senator Tillman, for we believe that he is at least honest in his expressions, and we believe him square in his [illegible]. [illegible] absolutely convinced of this one fact: That should Secretary Taft be nominated at Chicago for President of the United States, the colored voters of Ohio and the whole United States, 75 per cent of them at least calculation, would cast their votes for the straight Democratic ticket for President or remain away from the polls, thus making the election of a Democratic President absolutely certain."

FLEET HAS LEFT MAGDALENA BAY

BATTLESHIPS BEGIN CRUISE UP THE PACIFIC.

SAN DIEGO IS FIRST STOP

LARGE FUND RAISED FOR ENTERTAINMENT OF MEN.

A WELCOME AWAITS JACKIES

Cities Wearing Gala Attire in Honor of Guests—Personal Tribute will Be Paid to Rear Admiral Thomas in Absence of Evans.

SAN DIEGO, Cal., April 11.—The Atlantic fleet of 16 first-class battleships began today the last leg of its originally-planned cruise from Hampton Roads to the Golden Gate. The four divisions of the fleet weighed anchor at 4 p. m. and three-quarters of an hour later were threading their way out of Magdalena bay in the wake of the flagship Connecticut. The commanding figure on the after bridge of the flagship was that of Rear Admiral Charles M. Thomas, who began the journey to the Pacific at the head of the second squadron but who was promoted to command during the enforced absence of Rear Admiral Evans, the commander-in-chief.

Sailing in single column formation, according to dispatches received here, the ships passed Sail Rock and, rounding Entrada Point, turned in a long circle to the north. The six black-hulled destroyers of the torpedo flotilla gave a parting salute to the big white vessels and the historic stay of the American battleships in the Mexican bay was at an end.

Trip of 620 Miles.

An easy journey of 620 miles lies before the fleet, which is scheduled to arrive here and anchor off Coronado Beach at 1 p. m. on Tuesday. Admiral Thomas has allowed 69 hours for the run up the coast, requiring an average of only nine knots an hour. The ships started away at the usual cruising speed of ten knots, however, and will slow down during the latter part of the journey. The early hour of departure was fixed to guard against the possibility of delay in a fog.

When the ships reach San Diego they will have logged 13,569 knots since their departure from Hampton Roads on December 16 last. The Connecticut has 1,240 knots additional to her credit, on account of the trip to this port last week to bring Admiral Evans ashore and her subsequent return to Magdalena bay.

Every coast city from San Diego to San Francisco is to see the fleet during the next four weeks, it having been arranged that at all points where no stop is scheduled the ships will pass as close to shore as possible, always being well within the range of vision of persons gathered along the bluffs and beaches.

Preparations Complete.

The preparation for the four days of the ships at San Diego are complete. In this community of 40,000 inhabitants, a fund of nearly $20,000 has been raised for the entertainment of the officers and men of the navy. Interest in the coming visit is intense, the strong personal sentiment being reflected in the banners which everywhere wave a "welcome to our fleet."

San Diego has set an example which undoubtedly will be followed at all of the other California cities where Admiral Evans will be unable to participate in the ceremonies by arranging to pay a distinctly personal tribute to Rear Admiral Thomas, who will be the senior officer in command here. A handsome silver mounted cut glass buffet service has been subscribed for and suitably engraved and will be presented to Admiral Thomas next Wednesday afternoon when he will accept on behalf of Admiral Evans a golden key to the city mounted in native San Diego county gems.

Results of Regatta.

SAN DIEGO, Cal., April 11. (By Wireless Telegraph Company)—The results of yesterday's regatta at Magdalena bay were received this morning. The dispatch was as follows:

Magdalena Bay, April 10.—The ships are all in readiness for departure.

Yesterday's regatta was watched by the crews of all the vessels, filling decks and rigging. The results follow:

Pulling race, Battenburg cup, 10 miles, won by the Louisiana crew.

Belmont cup, two miles, won by the Louisiana crew.

Jamestown cup, one mile, for officers, won by the Georgia.

Havana cup, gigs, won by the Missouri.

Dunlap cup, two miles, for marines, won by the Alabama.

Dinghy race for the gunners "gang," won by the Minnesota.

Brebbel cup, two miles for engineers, won by the Kentucky.

Sailing races:

Colonial Dames cup for barges, distance 10 miles, won by the Connecticut.

Sailing launches, 10 miles, won by the Vermont.

Battery cup, gigs, three miles, New Jersey and Maine tied and will sail off the race at San Diego next week.

Rudderless cutters, five miles, won by the Minnesota.

Whale boats, five miles, won by the Maine.

WILL BORE FOR OIL

COMPANY FORMED TO DRILL FIVE DEEP WELLS.

Experts Make Most Flattering Report on Conditions in the Fountain Valley.

For the purpose of developing what they believe to be valuable oil fields in the Fountain valley, south of this city, a number of Colorado Springs and Denver men have organized the Colorado Springs Oil & Gas company, with a capital stock of $1,000,000. The incorporation papers have been filed with the secretary of state in Denver. The principal offices of the company will be in Colorado Springs. The officers of the new company are: President, Nathan Gregg, Denver; vice president and treasurer, Charles T. Lowndes, and secretary, Charles T. Fertig, both of this city. These together with Dr. H. B. Hayden of Colorado Springs and Nathan Gregg, Jr., of Denver, form the board of directors.

To Drill Five Wells.

An option on 1,500 acres, including the Donovan, Chilcott and Wright ranches southeast of this city, and a lease for 20 years on 5,000 acres of adjoining land, have been secured and sufficient money has been subscribed within the company to insure the drilling of five wells to a depth of 3,250 feet, the maximum to which the company expects to bore. The necessary machinery for the work has already been secured, and as soon as it can be installed on the ground, active work will be started by contractor to be selected from a number of experienced men now figuring on the work.

The stock of the company has been pooled with the exception of about 5,000 shares, at a par value of $1 each, which have been held in reserve to cover any unforeseen deficiency in the initial cost of the enterprise.

A Flattering Report.

The men behind this enterprise have taken it up on the strength of reports made by J. W. Frank, an oil expert with a wide reputation who has operated successfully in almost all the oil fields of America and who has made a most flattering report on the possibilities of the local field after a thorough examination of the ground. Mr. Frank says:

"I have found on the Donovan property an oil deposit which I consider one of the best I have ever encountered and far superior to the deposits which have been developed at Boulder and Florence. The numerous signs of oil on the surface of this property are very pronounced and show possibilities of securing a very large amount of oil. I can truthfully say

TO LAY CORNERSTONE

MAY 5 SELECTED AS DATE FOR CEREMONY.

High Masonic Officials of State Will Participate—Inscriptions Have Been Chosen.

Tuesday, May 5, is the date selected for the laying of the cornerstone of the new Masonic temple in Colorado Springs, and on that day Grand Master Joseph A. Davis of Boulder will be here to supervise the ceremonies, according to a letter received yesterday by Dr. W. A. Campbell from Charles Jacobson, grand secretary of the grand lodge of Colorado. The ceremony will take place at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, in accordance with the usual ritual of the order prescribed by the grand lodge, and will be accompanied by an oration by Grand Orator Melvin Edwards of Denver. This will be followed by a speech from some local member of the order, to be selected later.

Inscriptions Selected.

On the face of the cornerstone will be the following inscription: "Masonic Temple, A. D., 1908, A. L. 5908," and on the south side will be inscribed, "Laid by the Most Worshipful Grand Lodge, A. F. and A. M. of Colorado, May 5, 1908." In the box to be deposited in the cornerstone will be the official record of proceedings of the grand lodge, the grand chapter, the grand council and the grand commandery of the state for the year 1907, the program of the Scottish Rite Masons for the day, a Bible, a copy of the book containing the grand lodge officers and lodges of the state and the current issues of the city newspapers.

The work on the new building is progressing rapidly, and while the date set for the ceremony is later than desired by the contractor, the work will not be delayed, as the workmen can be employed on the rear of the building.

A movement is now on foot for the purchase of two bronze sphinxes to adorn the sides of the front entrance. These will cost between $1,500 and $2,000.

INJUNCTION IS DENIED

CITY WINS CASCADE AVENUE PARKING CASE.

Controversy Not Likely to Be Carried to the State Supreme Court.

Judge W. S. Morris of the district court yesterday denied the application of Gen. William J. Palmer and other property owners of property abutting on Cascade avenue between Cache la Poudre street and Platte avenue, by which it was sought to restrain the city from carrying out its plans for parking the middle portion of that street. The attorneys for the plaintiffs were given 60 days in which to file a bill of exceptions. According to Attorney McBeth of the Denver law firm of McBeth and May, it has not been decided whether to carry the case to the state supreme court. It is the general opinion among lawyers of this city, however, that the case will be dropped, in which event the City Council will proceed with its plans and have the parking done as soon as possible.

The Court's Ruling.

In giving his decision Judge Morris said that city councils as a rule had very large discretionary powers in the matter of city improvements and the methods of carrying them into effect. In the present case he said that the petition for the middle parking was valid and so long as the ends sought after by the council did not violate any right or privilege of residents or property owners beyond the bounds of reason, the court had no grounds upon which to interfere.

The city was represented in the case by City Attorney W. B. Price and former Mayor Ira Harris. The arguments for both sides were most exhaustive.

HELD FOR ASSAULT ON WELLS

Old-Time Miner and Ranchman Arrested in Telluride.

TELLURIDE, Colo., April 11.—William McDonald, an old-time miner and ranchman, was arrested at Norwood today on suspicion of having been connected with the attempted assassination of General Bulkley Wells, general manager of the Smuggler-Union mine, by an explosion of dynamite under his bed, March 28 last. It is understood he is alleged to have made remarks tending to show familiarity with the details of the affair.

Gazette Offers New Features

The omission of the usual comic supplement to The Gazette this morning is due to the inauguration of a new series of "funnies" that has been contracted for. There was some unavoidable confusion in making the change, so that the new features planned will not be delivered with the paper until next Sunday.

Beginning with Easter, an entirely new comic supplement will be a feature of The Gazette. New characters, new ideas, new artists and everything else new connected with the most up-to-date "funnies" will be furnished every Sunday.

The Gazette hereafter will also give its readers an additional color section, which will be general in character. This will comprise the latest and best newspaper features to be obtained.

FIGHT IS ON IN PENNSYLVANIA

PRIMARY ELECTIONS HELD BY ALL PARTIES.

MUCH OPPOSITION TO BRYAN

DELEGATES WILL PROBABLY NOT BE INSTRUCTED.

LOCAL OPTION A BIG ISSUE

Temperance Workers and Church People All Over the State Take Active Part in Primaries. Knox Presidential Choice of Republicans.

PITTSBURG, April 11.—Returns from today's primary election are so meager tonight as to give but little authentic information on the results, and all factions are claiming victory. In advocacy of the local option, church people and temperance workers took a part in today's contests such as never before was taken in politics in this part of the state. This question was carried into some of the congressional districts. In the Thirty-second, Congressman A. J. Barfield sought renomination on a platform opposed to local option, and the indications are that he has won. In the Twenty-fourth district, Congressman E. F. Acheson declared for local option and was defeated by John F. Tener, a former baseball player. The delegates to the national conventions will not be known tonight, possibly not for several days.

The only issue before the Democrats was the indorsement of W. J. Bryan for the presidency. The Bryan league made a hard fight for instructed delegates and to secure control of the party organization. Both sides claim victory, but the indications are that the anti-Bryan forces have won in most of the districts.

Delegates Chosen.

PHILADELPHIA, April 11.—The primary elections of all political parties in Pennsylvania were held throughout the state today. Each party elected delegates to its national and state conventions and nominated candidates for Congress and the legislature, in addition to [illegible] and nearly all the municipalities in the commonwealth named candidates for various minor offices.

The Republican state convention having indorsed United States Senator Knox for the presidential nomination, there were no contests in that party in its presidential preference, but there were numerous sharp skirmishes over the individuals who will make up Pennsylvania's delegation to Chicago.

There was a fight in many sections of the state in the Democratic party over the question of whether the delegation to the Denver convention shall be instructed for W. J. Bryan or shall go to the convention without instructions.

Fight on Bryan.

Democratic National Committeeman James Guffey of Pittsburg is opposed to instructing the delegates, while other prominent men in the organization—among them State Treasurer William H. Berry—have been quite active in a movement to have the state convention instruct the delegates for Bryan.

The returns tonight are late and scattered and give no indication of what the state convention may do.

The hottest fight of the day was over the candidates for both houses of the legislature. Twenty-five senators, half of the senate and a full house, 207 members are to be elected in November. Local option appeared to be the paramount issue and there were spirited contests in every section of the state. The next legislature will elect a United States Senator and Senator Penrose, whose term will expire next March, is a candidate for re-election. Some of the independent Republican leaders had announced that they would oppose his candidacy and, in consequence, the senator's return to Washington was an issue in some sections of the state.

Philadelphia Primaries.

The primaries in Philadelphia passed off quietly. The hardest were in several wards where the Republicans were split into several factions. With few exceptions, however, the Republican candidates for Congress, national and state delegates were elected, and the slated candidates for legislature nominations were successful. The Democratic slated candidates for Congress were also nominated, but there were many fights over national and state delegates. Among those who were elected Republican national delegates from Philadelphia are United States Senator Penrose, Insurance Commissioner Israel Durham and State Senator James McNichol.

Colonel Wesley Andrews, chairman of the Republican state committee, who received the returns in Senator Penrose's office last night, said:

"Colonel Penrose's friends have swept the state and his re-election to the United States senate is assured."

Returns received up to a late hour tonight show that local option candidates won in many places.

PITTSBURG, April 11.—Colonel J. M. Guffey, national committeeman and leader of the Democratic party in Pennsylvania, when seen tonight, said: "From information received from over the state the delegates elected at today's primaries to the state conven-

Representative Lilley of Connecticut Urges Abandonment of Several Naval Yards and the Improvement of Others—Appropriation Bill Discussed.

WASHINGTON, April 11.—Debate on the naval appropriation bill in the House of Representatives today resolved itself, in the main, to a discussion of the possibilities of a war between the United States and Japan. In line with his well-known views on the subject, Mr. Hobson of Alabama, pleaded for four battleships instead of two for the next fiscal year and pointed out that the United States should have a fixed policy with regard to naval construction. A war between the yellow and white races, he regarded as inevitable, and he asserted that Japan's present military activity was with a view to the supremacy of the Pacific and, as a natural result, there would be a clash at arms with the United States.

Might Have Prevented War.

Mr. Hobson went so far as to say that fifty million dollars in battleships would have enabled the United States to force Russia to evacuate Manchuria at the time she agreed to do so and in that case the war between Russia and Japan would have been averted.

"The war clouds are gathering," Mr. Hobson said in conclusion, "but America could by carrying out a legitimate national policy, prevent it. It is not a vision; it is not a dream. You and I

FRIEND OF BLACK MAN

FORAKER LOSES HIS RELIGION TALKING TO NEGROES.

Condemns Republican Leaders Who Ignored Negro Delegates at Virginia Republican Convention.

WASHINGTON, April 11.—An enthusiastic greeting was given to Senator Foraker today by the Baltimore conference of the A. M. E. church in session here. In introducing the Ohio senator, Bishop [illegible] paid him a special tribute as the friend and defender of his people.

The senator referred to the great work of the A. M. E. church in uplifting and making better the black race in the last forty years and said it now had everything guaranteed to it except its political rights.

"You see," the senator added, "I try to stick to my text, but before I know it, I lose my religion in talking to you. I lost it when I heard of the outbreak at Atlanta a short time ago. I lost it again when I heard of the Brownsville affair. I would not have referred to that unless you had [illegible] insisted upon it. And I lost it only a few days ago when I read of the action of the Virginia Republican convention at Lynchburg that ignored the delegates of your race. I think it was a shame and I don't care who knows it. I don't care to criticise my party, but I do condemn those who represent it. The question that was raised in that Virginia convention will be carried for settlement to the next national convention at Chicago. We will find out then whether the party of Lincoln, of Grant and of McKinley a Lily White party. If it is, I assure you that there will soon be new parties in the field which will stand for the rights of humanity, religion and the right kind of politics go hand in hand."

EASTER

The Springs Store

To tell you that next Sunday is Easter is not the object of this confab. You are aware of it and have waited longer than usual for its coming. The lateness of Easter has been in your favor, you have had plenty of time and opportunity to prepare for it. You will have no valid excuse to offer should you attempt to come out on this day without sure signs of spring in your make-up. One week is not long, but it's time enough to make such preparations necessary in personal appearance as to pass muster on this coming Easter Sunday. The Springs Store can help you. We are prepared for the deluge of this week's business, both with extra help and such Easter apparel and accessories that are created for and demanded by fashion for this time. For better results, prompt attention and more satisfactory service we recommend morning shopping for this week.

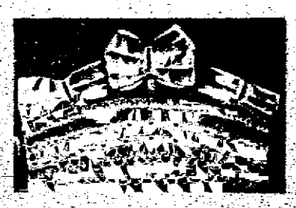

EASTER MILLINERY

Captivating Hats for Easter

Much Excitement Caused.

Mr. Brackett's action caused the thousand odd delegates and the hundreds of spectators who filled the gallery, much excitement. When the debate had reached a point of spirited tension, Speaker Wadsworth moved that the question of adopting the majority report of the committee on resolutions, indorsing Governor Hughes along the lines of the convention's indorsement of Levi P. Morton in 1896, and that of President Roosevelt in 1900, be put in the convention, and his majority report was adopted, with only a few scattering "noes" heard above the shouts of the bulk of the delegates.

Premonition of a turbulent session was felt before the opening of the convention, when the Westchester county delegation, at a caucus, decided to protest against the indorsement of Hughes by voting against the Hughes resolution and declaring for an uninstructed delegation. This plan was nullified by the unexpected action of Senator Brackett in submitting his minority report. In meeting this situation, the majority of the convention adopted the platform by a viva voce vote, and the Westchester delegation lost all chance of voting as a delegation against Hughes' indorsement.

The new Republican state committee, elected at the convention today, held a brief session immediately after the adjournment of the convention and re-elected former Lieutenant Governor Timothy L. Woodruff as chairman.

Platform of Unusual Interest.

Believing that the platform foreshadowed, in several particulars, the platform that will be adopted by the Chicago national convention, more than usual interest attaches to its recommendations, which were confined practically to national issues. Congressman J. Sloat Fassett of Elmira, although not a member of the committee on resolutions, said in an interview that he had taken the resolutions to Washington a few days ago and carefully considered them there, and that he felt assured that they would be most satisfactory to all the delegates.

The platform indorses in strong terms the administrations of President Roosevelt and Governor Hughes, and commends the policies of the federal administration. A revision of the tariff is favored and the action of Congress in declining to revise the tariff by piecemeal, is indorsed. Changes are advocated in the currency laws to provide a more elastic and satisfactory monetary system.

It was not until State Chairman Woodruff announced ex-Governor B. B. Odell and Herbert Parsons, chairman of the Republican county committee, as a committee to escort ex-Lieutenant Governor M. Lynn Bruce to the platform as temporary chairman, that the first real demonstration occurred. For the first time in a score or more of years, Senator T. C. Platt, one-time leader of the party in state councils, was not in his accustomed seat with the Tioga county delegation. It was said that Senator Platt was ill. There was lively applause when Chairman Bruce referred in his speech to President Roosevelt and Governor Hughes.

Prepare Minority Report.

The committee on credentials decided to seat both Niagara county delegations and to give each delegate half a vote. Meanwhile, the committee on resolutions, sitting in a far corner of Carnegie hall, was struggling over a resolution submitted by Senator Brackett to request all delegates to the national convention to work for Governor Hughes. Congressman Dwight finally moved that Brackett's resolution be tabled, which motion was carried by a vote of 24 to 10. State Chairman Woodruff and others believed that the best interests of all concerned would be conserved if Senator Brackett was given an opportunity to present a minority report, and this permission was granted. Seven members of the resolutions committee signed the minority report. Edwin Merritt and Congressman George Malby of St. Lawrence county, vigorously opposed in committee, passage of a resolution requesting that the tariff on wood pulp be immediately taken off, and their opposition prevailed.

It was not until near the end of Chairman Sherman's speech that the committee on resolutions finished its labors, and its chairman, State Senator Horace White of Syracuse, took the platform amid a silence that indicated suppressed excitement and read the platform indorsing Governor Hughes and commending the state and federal administrations. The selection of the four delegates-at-large and their alternates was quickly ratified by a unanimous vote of the convention. The platform as adopted says:

The Platform.

The Republican party of the state of New York, at the beginning of a national campaign, declares its continued allegiance to those principles of government which have given honor to the nation and prosperity to its citizens during the years it has been intrusted with the control of the government.

At this time, when the welfare of the people so greatly depends upon the conduct of our government, a clear assurance of Republican victory in the nation and in the state this autumn would exert a powerful influence in restoring public confidence and in strengthening the widespread expectation of a speedy return of national prosperity.

We indorse the great administration of President Roosevelt and we are proud that he is a Republican from New York. His noble work has exemplified the principles of equality upon which this government was founded and has presented a record of achievement which gives to him for all time pre-eminence among the benefactors of the nation. His fearless and patriotic treatment of all questions involving our foreign relations has maintained and increased the respect for the American flag throughout the world.

With sound judgment and unflinching courage, he has entered upon the solution of economic problems at home and he earnestly labored to secure to every individual, whether rich or poor, his constitutional guarantee of equality before the law. He has firmly opposed the encroachments of those corporations individual opportunity and has with equal firmness insisted upon a square deal for all.

Oppose Government Ownership.

His policies are Republican policies, and to them we pledge our continued loyalty and support. We believe in the impartial enforcement of the law and the rights of the individual in commercial, industrial and political affairs. We believe that corporations which take their right to exist from authority of government, should be under the regulation and supervision of the government. But we are unequivocally opposed to government ownership of such corporations.

We believe in protection to American industries. That principle must be maintained, but we approve of such revision of the tariff schedules as will prevent injustice and inequalities by retaining customs duties which shall at least equal the difference between the cost of production at home and abroad. We indorse and approve the policy of Congress in refusing to revise the tariff by piecemeal. We recommend a revision that will maintain the policy of the Republican party, as opposed to that of the Democratic party; that the tariff should not be for revenue only; but first of all for the protection of the American wage-earner, manufacturer, producer and farmer in the struggle against foreign capital and labor for commercial and industrial supremacy.

We favor such changes in the currency and banking laws as will meet the increasing demands of business, satisfy the needs of the entire country and present at all times a stable and absolutely secure medium of exchange and we urge upon Congress prompt action to this end.

The platform favors the upbuilding of the American navy, the speedy completion of the Panama canal, the development of the American merchant marine, the improvement of the inland waterways, the re-enactment of popular government in the Philippine islands and commends the movement for the settlement of international difficulties and also of all disputes between labor and capital by arbitration.

The platform concludes:

Hughes Administration Indorsed.

We indorse the administration of Governor Charles E. Hughes, as chief executive. He has set an example of official courage and fidelity. Under his administration the business of the state has been so transacted as to merit and receive general commendation. It has been carried on economically and prudently. The public service has been upon a high plane.

In the settlement of those economic questions in which the state, the individual and the corporation share in their rights and responsibilities, Governor Hughes has striven to insure an exact measure of justice. His policies and his acts have been laid before the people like and open book.

Relying upon his devotion to the interests of American citizens and trusting in his wisdom, his courage and his statesmanship, we direct the delegates, this day chosen, to present his name to the national Republican convention to be held at Chicago, as New York's candidate, and to use all honorable means to bring about his nomination for President of the United States.

tion to be held in May absolutely insures an uninstructed delegation from Pennsylvania to the Denver convention and rightly so. Pennsylvania can deliver no votes in the electorial college and should be left free to join in the choice of a candidate deemed available by the states that elect Democratic presidents."

Ships Quiet Easter Sunday.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., April 11.—The movement of the Church federation of this city, in opposition to the proposed parade of battleships at San Pedro on Easter Sunday, the day following the fleet's arrival in the harbor, has resulted in the transmission of a request from Rear Admiral Evans at Paso Robles to Rear Admiral Thomas, commanding the squadron, that will change the original program providing for division of the fleet after its arrival. Admiral Thomas is requested to order the various divisions to drop out at the appointed anchorages, which will prevent any movement of ships on Easter Sunday.

Treatment Is Approved.

PASO ROBLES HOT SPRINGS, Cal., April 11.—After a thorough examination of Admiral Evans and a consultation over his condition, the following statement is given out tonight:

"After consultation we are of the opinion that Admiral Evans should remain at Paso Robles until he has undergone a thorough trial of the course of treatment he is now undergoing and until his regular physician says that it is advisable to move him. We approve of the treatment he is now receiving."

The statement is from Drs. E. A. Bryant, George W. Lasher and W. A. Edwards of Los Angeles, who were sent to Paso Robles by the fleet reception committee of that city.

Admiral Evans is weaker tonight than he has been before and is suffering some pain from his knee.

SCIENCE MEETING CLOSES

Railroads and Corporation Problems Discussed.

PHILADELPHIA, April 11.—The closing sessions of the annual meeting of the Academy of Political and Social Science were held this afternoon and tonight, at which the questions "The Nation and the Railways" and "The Federal and State Control of Corporations" were discussed by men who hold opposite opinions concerning federal control of corporations.

Among the speakers at tonight's session were Congressmen Burton of Ohio, John Sharp Williams of Mississippi, and James L. Slayden of Texas; United States Circuit Court Judge C. M. Hough of New York, and Henry M. Hoyt, solicitor general of the United States, Washington, D. C.

INDEPENDENTS MEET LATE

party convention after the conventions of the Democratic and Republican parties was reached so that the plans and nominations of those two parties might be taken into account. Organizations have already been established, it is said, in 24 states, where state committeemen have been chosen.

BRIEF BITS OF NEWS.

HELENA, Mont., April 11.—At the meeting here this afternoon of the Democratic state committee the candidacy of William J. Bryan for the presidency was indorsed without a dissenting vote. Delegates to the national convention at Denver will be chosen at the state convention at Bozeman, June 19, while the convention for the nomination of state officers will be held at Anaconda, September 8.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 11.—Six jurors now occupy the box in the Ruef-Parkside bribery trial before Superior Judge Dooling. A venire of 50 new names was drawn this morning.

LUDLOW, Mass., April 11.—The Ludlow Manufacturing association announced a 6 per cent reduction in wages, beginning this week. The cut will affect about 1,000 operatives.

PHILADELPHIA, April 11.—An appropriation of $5,000, to be expended for employment and not the establishment of relief centers, is the plan that has been adopted by the citizens' permanent relief committee for aiding the unemployed of the city.

WILL BORE FOR OIL

that this property is one of the best I have ever encountered, although I have located oil wells in California, Nevada, Washington, Texas and Canada."

Says Conditions Favorable.

Professor Arthur Lakes of Denver, in his report made after personal examination of the property, says:

"I consider the property a likely one and one highly deserving of prospecting and drilling. The abundance of oil signs or oil seeps along the course of Spring creek argues a fair-sized area underlaid by deposits of oil. The close resemblance to the geological conditions as observed at Florence and Boulder, is favorable. Taking the property as a whole, it offers very favorable conditions."

Several years ago the indications of oil in this district were observed by Engineer H. I. Reed, who made a report to the local Chamber of Commerce as follows:

"I do not presume to pass as an oil expert, still I am very much surprised to find at different times large quantities of oil floating upon the water surface and near the point where these gaugings were made. At one time I collected quite a quantity of crude petroleum by dipping it up in a bottle. This condition I observed at three different times."

On the strength of the exhaustive reports made by Messrs. Frank and Lakes, the men interested in the company have invested their money and will endeavor to learn definitely whether or not the supposed oil deposit exists.

FIVE MEN LOSE THEIR LIVES AT NEW YORK.

Small Boat Is Upset and Occupants Perish—Several Fishermen Are Missing.

NEW YORK, April 11.—Five men are known to have lost their lives, a number of boatmen are reported missing, and dozens of other persons were injured today in a furious wind storm which set in this afternoon.

The wind's velocity at times was as high as 60 miles an hour. Pedestrians suffered much discomfort, besides being in constant danger from falling chimneys, shutters, awnings and other articles, which were torn from their fastenings. Two men met death from this cause—John O'Brien, an expressman of Jersey City, and Thomas Talbot of Brooklyn, a special policeman.

A boat containing three men was seen to upset before the wind in Pelham bay, but those on shore at the moment could do nothing and were forced to see the men drown. Owners of boathouses reported to the police late tonight that a number of their small boats, hired by fishermen, had not returned and they feared for the occupants. A shore patrol was established tonight to search for the missing men.

Texan, After Shooting Son-in-Law, Opens Fire on Officers.

FORT WORTH, Texas, April 11.—Enraged over domestic troubles, Ike S. Knight, a teamster, shot and killed Edwin Larmon, a son-in-law, this evening, and then, to evade capture, shot and mortally wounded Oscar R. Montgomery, chief of police of North Fort Worth and severely wounded Richard Howell, a former city marshall. Pursued by a mob of men, finally he sought a point of vantage in the stone creamery. He finally agreed to surrender and was taken to Dallas for safekeeping.

CROW INDIANS PROTEST

Not in Favor of Opening Their Reservation for Settlement.

WASHINGTON, April 11.—The delegates from the Crow Indian tribe, now in the city, appeared before the Senate committee on Indian affairs today, and all opposed the passage of the bill pending in the Senate for the opening of their reservation for settlement. All but one of the delegates favored the Dixon army horse breeding bill, by which, if the land should be opened, 350,000 acres will be set aside for the tribe to breed horses for the army.

The delegates will go before the committee next Monday, when they will give their views on the details of the horse bill.

Senator Clapp, chairman of the committee, told the delegates today the policy of Congress was clearly in favor of making such lands as theirs available for settlement.

Words of Praise

For the several ingredients of which Dr. Pierce's medicines are composed, as given by leaders in all the several schools of medicine, should have far more weight than any amount of non-professional testimonials. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription has THE BADGE OF HONESTY on every bottle-wrapper, in a full list of all its ingredients printed in plain English.

If you are an invalid woman and suffer from frequent headache, backache, gnawing distress in stomach, periodical pains, disagreeable, catarrhal, pelvic drain, dragging down distress in lower abdomen or pelvis, perhaps dark spots or specks dancing before the eyes, faint spells and kindred symptoms caused by female weakness, or other derangement of the feminine organs, you can not do better than take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

The hospital, surgeon's knife and operating table may be avoided by the timely use of "Favorite Prescription" in such cases. Thereby the obnoxious examinations and local treatments of the family physician can be avoided and a thorough course of successful treatment carried out in the privacy of the home. "Favorite Prescription" is composed of the very best native medicinal roots known to medical science for the cure of woman's peculiar ailments, contains no alcohol and no harmful or habit-forming drugs.

Do not expect too much from "Favorite Prescription;" it will not perform miracles; it will not disolve or cure tumors. No medicine will. It will do as much to establish vigorous health in most weaknesses and ailments peculiarly incident to women as any medicine can. It must be given a fair chance by perseverance in its use for a reasonable length of time.

You can't afford to accept a secret nostrum as a substitute for this remedy of known composition.

Sick women are invited to consult Dr. Pierce, by letter, free. All correspondence is guarded as sacredly secret and womanly confidences are protected by professional privacy. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets the best laxative and regulator of the bowels. They invigorate stomach, liver and bowels. One a laxative; two or three a cathartic. Easy to take as candy.

Easter, April 19th, Dress Parade.

Everybody expects everybody else to appear Easter morning in fresh Spring apparel. Are you ready for the official Spring opening:

To feel at ease among well-dressed men, you must be well dressed yourself. To feel at ease, your clothes must fit you perfectly and your garments must be cut to the approved fashions and be nicely tailored, but they need not be costly.

The $20, $25, $30, $35 and $40 suits from several reputable tailoring establishments are hanging side by side in our clothing cabinets—come in and look them over—it's easy to get the right thing here.

DEMONSTRATIONS GIVEN.

A Square Deal

Is assured you when you buy one of Dr. Pierce's Family Medicines for all the ingredients entering into them are printed on the bottle-wrappers and attested under oath as being complete and correct. They are gathered from Nature's laboratory, being selected from the most valuable native, medicinal roots found growing in our American forests. While potent to cure they are perfectly harmless even to the most delicate women and children.

Not a drop of alcohol enters into Dr. Pierce's leading medicines. A much better agent is used both for extracting and preserving the medicinal principles, viz. pure triple-refined glycerine of proper strength. This agent possesses medicinal properties of its own, being a most valuable anti-septic and anti-ferment, nutritive and soothing demulcent.

Glycerine plays an important part in Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery in the cure of indigestion, dyspepsia and weak stomach, attended by sour risings, "heartburn," foul breath, coated tongue, poor appetite, gnawing feeling in stomach, biliousness and kindred derangements of the stomach, liver and bowels.

For all diseases of the mucous membranes, the "Golden Medical Discovery" is a specific. Catarrh, whether of the nasal passages or of the stomach, bowels or pelvic organs is cured by it. In Chronic Catarrh of the Nasal passages, it is well, while taking the "Golden Medical Discovery" for the necessary constitutional treatment, to cleanse the passages freely two or three times a day with Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. This thorough course of treatment generally cures even in the worst cases.

In coughs and hoarseness caused by bronchial, throat and lung affections, except consumption in its advanced stages, the "Golden Medical Discovery" is a most efficient remedy, especially in those obstinate, hang-on-coughs caused by irritation and congestion of the "Discovery" is not so good for acute coughs arising from sudden colds, nor must it be expected to cure consumption in its advanced stages—no medicine will do that—but for all the obstinate hang-on or chronic coughs, which, if neglected, or badly treated, lead up to consumption, it is the best medicine that can be taken.

It's an insult to your intelligence for a dealer to endeavor to palm off upon you some nostrum of unknown composition in place of Dr. Pierce's world-famed medicines which are OF KNOWN COMPOSITION. Most dealers recommend Doctor Pierce's medicines because they know what they are made of and that the ingredients employed are among the most valuable that a medicine for like purposes can be made of. The same is true of leading physicians who do not hesitate to recommend them, since they know exactly what they contain and that their ingredients are the very best known to medical science for the cure of the several diseases for which these medicines are recommended.

With tricky dealers it is different.

Something else that pays them a little greater profit will be urged upon you as "just as good," or even better. You can hardly afford to accept a substitute of unknown composition and without any particular record of cures in place of Doctor Pierce's medicines which are OF KNOWN COMPOSITION and have a record of forty years of cures behind them. You know what you want and it is the dealer's business to

The Graceful Lines

Our effort in involving in this season's products are both pleasing and popular.

Current styles call for a long, narrow, graceful lapel effect, which, as ordinarily executed, gives to otherwise fashionable garments a skimpy, unsightly appearance. The N. & H. idea is to give to these graceful lapels a peculiarly elegant sweep which imparts not only a stylish, but a highly pleasing effect—found only in N. & H. tailored garments.

Let us show you how we incorporate grace into a suit of clothes or overcoat at $20 to $50.

Mrs. Burchmore Loses Big Damage Suit for Alleged Injuries Sustained in Hotel.

A verdict in favor of the Antlers Hotel company, in the suit brought against it for $25,000 damages by Mrs. Adelaide H. Burchmore of Boston, was returned by the jury in the district court, yesterday, after a deliberation of nine hours. The verdict was in accord with the instructions given by Judge W. S. Morris, who dwelt upon the fact that the law provided that if the evidence did not show that the company was aware of any defect in the chair, which broke down under Mrs. Burchmore's weight, the jury should bring in a verdict in favor of the defendant. The evidence showed that the defect in the chair was a hidden one and that the company was innocent of any negligence just the same as if the accident had happened in a private house.

The jury was not called upon to determine the extent of Mrs. Burchmore's alleged injuries, as the determination of the company's responsibility eliminated the question of injuries from the case. The evidence of the doctors, who examined the plaintiff, went to show that the alleged injuries were more imaginary than real.

The defendant was given fifteen days to file a motion for a new trial.

BUILDING LOWER TERMINALS

Manitou Incline Soon Be in Operation—Many Improvements Under Way.

Work on the construction of the lower terminals for the Manitou Incline railway has been started and is now well under way. The depot is to be located just north of the Iron Springs. Within a short time work will start upon the construction of the buildings at the summit of Mt. Manitou, where a power plant, pavilion and a number of summer cottages are to be erected. Water connections have been made for the buildings at the summit.

A tract of forty acres near the top of the mountain has been leased by the company from the United States forestry department, and this is to be turned into a summer camping spot and picnic ground. It will probably be known as Forest Park.

Machinery for the power plant, together with the new cables, is expected to arrive within ten days, and the installation will begin as soon as possible. The machinery comes from Denver and the cables from Trenton, N. J. The grading of the lower end of the line has been finished, but the completion of the double track has been delayed by inability to secure ties.

Within a short time the construction of the trail, which is to lead from the summit of Mt. Manitou to the printing office on the Cog road, will begin. It will ultimately become a wagon road.

Contracts have been let for thirty arc lights which are to be strung at regular intervals along the line of the railway. This will illumine the road and make it visible for many miles out on the plains.

STAR BOARDER IN CASE

MRS. SAXTON'S FORMER CHEF NOW WANTED.

Direct Information May Be Filed Against Her if Wanted Arrested.

Complications of an unexpected nature were injected in the case in Justice O. R. Dunnington's court against Mrs. Hertha May Saxton, yesterday, by the dismissal of Mrs. Saxton and the swearing out of a warrant for the arrest of J. L. Shryver, a Denver chef, charging him with complicity in the alleged theft of the wardrobe of Thomas J. Fickle of St. Louis, upon which the charge against Mrs. Saxton. As a result of the dismissal of the suit a direct information against Mrs. Saxton may be filed in the district court tomorrow.

Connected with the entrance of Shryver into the case is a story to the effect that while he was ostensibly employed as chef at the boarding house on North Cascade avenue by Mrs. Saxton, he also appeared somewhat in the role of a "star boarder," and the theory of the officers is that he was connected with the alleged disappearance of the goods. Efforts will be made to locate Shryver, and the likelihood of direct information being filed hangs largely on whether or not the man is secured, as it is believed by the district attorney's office that his evidence is of material importance in the case. When asked as to his whereabouts in the trial yesterday, Mrs. Saxton replied that to the best of her belief he had left Denver and gone south.

Holds Husband to Blame.

According to Mrs. Saxton's story, the case brought against her has been instigated by her husband in order to prejudice her suit for a divorce which comes up in the district court next Tuesday. She alleges that he is the more eager in his prosecution of the case by reason of the fact that her father, a wealthy cattleman of Kansas, is dying, and that she will be heir to a large part of his estate, valued at $80,000, in the event of his death.

"My husband hopes to delay the divorce proceedings until after the death of my father in the hope that he may then share with me the money from my father's estate," said Mrs. Saxton yesterday. "When the case was up in court he wept like a baby and swore he loved me heart and soul, thus working upon the sympathies of the jury, which disagreed, four of them being in my favor and two in his. Now he wants to delay the divorce proceedings in the hope that my father will die, and he will be able to get part of the estate. He has consulted a clairvoyant, who has assured him that if he keeps up his persecutions I will come to him with open arms before the first of next month and seek a reconciliation."

The Divorce Proceedings.

Mrs. Saxton brought suit for divorce several months ago on the grounds of cruelty and nonsupport, and was given $40 a month alimony by the court until the case should be settled. In the hearing last November the jury disagreed and Mrs. Saxton's application for a new trial was granted. In the meantime, Mrs. Saxton has been in her former home in Kansas, and on her return here was arrested on the charge of larceny.

There were eight more names added to the list yesterday of Colorado Springs people who will go on the Midland special train that will leave at noon on Saturday, April 25, for the western coast. It is expected that other names will be added during the week.

SULLIVAN SEEKS ADVICE.

Here to Confer with Boynton Concerning His Defeat.

Dan M. Sullivan, postmaster of Cripple Creek, was in Colorado Springs yesterday to confer with W. S. Boynton in regard to the action in securing control of the committee by what Sullivan claims to have been unjust methods. According to Sullivan, 16 vacancies on the committee were filled by Chairman Rollestone by appointment, whereas they should have been filled by the entire committee. Sullivan was beaten by a vote of 28 to 20. He says that he will seek the support of the Republican party in Teller county in the primaries next Wednesday and, failing in that, will carry his fight to the state convention.

STATE MEETING HERE

GRAND COUNCIL OF ROYAL ARCANUM COMING.

Annual Gathering to Be Held Next Friday. More than 100 Delegates Expected.

The annual gathering of the Grand council, Royal Arcanum, of the state of Colorado, will be held in Colorado Springs next Friday in Odd Fellows' hall, the first session to open at 10 o'clock in the morning. There will be an afternoon session and the meeting will close with a grand banquet at the Alamo hotel in the evening beginning at 7:30 o'clock.

Arrangements have been fully completed for the state meeting. It is expected that there will be more than 100 delegates here representing all parts of the state. Eldorado council, No. 1114 of Colorado Springs, has charge of the details of the meeting.

While no specific plan of entertainment other than the banquet in the evening has been arranged, those delegates who come before Friday morning and who remain after the meeting is adjourned will be well taken care of by members of the local council. The various committees will see that their stay is made pleasant. The Alamo hotel will be the headquarters of the Grand Council members during the convention and most of the outside delegates will stop there while in the city.

Officers of Colorado Springs council are H. M. Thornton, regent; Arnold Sydegger, secretary; W. D. Paulson, treasurer, and A. J. Boland, collector. The committee having charge of the banquet consists of H. Strang, W. D. Paulson, H. M. Thornton and Dr. J. R. Johnson.

KOONS PATENTS NEW BROODER

Company Formed to Handle Inventions of Well-Known Springs Letter Carrier.

Virgil C. Koons, a Colorado Springs letter carrier who has already been granted a number of patents, has just received notification that he has secured another, one that he considers among the most valuable from a financial standpoint. His last patent is a brooder for young chickens.

The previous patents of Mr. Koons deal with his calling, and are on mail carts and mail boxes. His last recognition from the patent office at Washington practically assures the establishment of an industry in Colorado Springs for the manufacture of all the products of his inventive genius, since a company has been incorporated with a capital of $100,000, to handle them. Those who are named as incorporators of the new company and who will have the direction of its affairs, are W. F. Lucas, the well-known bicycle dealer; J. C. Spicer, a real estate dealer, and A. A. Hilton, of the Houston Lumber company. They comprise the officers.

That the newly-invented brooder is practical and accomplishes the work intended will be demonstrated this week by an exhibit in the window at 119 North Tejon street. This demonstration will consist of new brooders in operation, showing the little chicks as they are taken care of by the invention. It will be there tomorrow and Tuesday in order to let the public see it in actual operation.

The new brooder has attracted wide attention among poultry breeders and will probably be one of the attractions at the meeting of poultry enthusiasts of the county next summer at the Stratton park pavilion.

ROBBINS STARTS SIX DAY SALE

Men and young men who are always on the alert to save money on the clothes they wear must keep in constant touch with the "big store on the corner." One week from tomorrow workmen will start remodeling this store, and to save the stock from dust and dirt, the Robbins Co. will start the biggest sale of the year tomorrow. 20 per cent discount will be offered for six days only, and inasmuch as it is the week previous to Easter the offer is very opportune. In fact it is seldom if ever that the very newest spring garments are offered at such startling reductions. This sale includes all the well known makes for which the Robbins store is famous. Hart, Schaffner & Marx, Kuppenheimers and the rest. In newest styles and fabrics and all on sale at 20 per cent off. The sale extends to the shoe department also, everything here goes at 65 cents on the dollar. This is an unprecedented sale and no man can afford to overlook this chance to save.

AT THE EMPIRE.

A glance at the program this week insures a highly entertaining evening for all those who attend this popular play house. Big, high-priced acts, stars on the circuit, will show here this week.

Among the headliners is Hystidis, the human chameleon, who offers an act entirely new and distinctive. In fact, it is the only act of its kind in the world and is alone worth the price of admission. As usual the popular motion pictures will show an entirely new set of the latest pictures and an illustrated song will be rendered in the usual pleasing manner. Herman and Rice will be seen in original and unique acrobatic stunts. They are one of the highest priced acts on the circuit, having just been secured from one of the leading circus companies.

In a class by themselves as German comedians Nixon and Norton will be sure favorites on the bill. They introduce some of the best singing and dancing that has yet been seen on the local stage. Taken as a whole the program this week is a sure hit and will, no doubt, draw crowded houses all week.

Pimples Will Leave You

In 5 Days You Can Get Rid of Skin Eruptions by Our New Calcium Sulphide Wafers.

Trial Package to Prove It Sent Free.

If you are one of the unfortunates who can't get away from your pimples, and you have tried almost everything under heaven to get rid of them, take a few of Stuart's Calcium Wafers every day. Do fast slightly for a few days, and in less than a week look at yourself in the mirror.

You will then say that Stuart's Calcium Wafers are a wonder in getting rid of all eruptions.

These wonderful little vegetable compounds contain the most effective blood purifier ever discovered, calcium sulphide.

No matter what your trouble is, whether pimples, blotches, blackheads, rash, tetter, eczema, or scabby crusts, you can solemnly depend upon Stuart's Calcium Wafers as never-failing.

Stuart's Calcium Wafers have cured both in three days and the worst cases of skin diseases in a week. Every particle of impurity is driven out of your system completely, never to return, and it is done without deranging your system in the slightest.

Most treatments for the blood and for skin eruptions are miserably slow in their results, and besides, many of them are poisonous. Stuart's Calcium Wafers contain no poison, or drug of any kind; they are absolutely harmless, and yet do work which cannot fail to surprise you.

Don't go around with a humiliating, disgusting mass of pimples and blackheads on your face. A face covered over with these disgusting things makes people turn away from you, and breeds failure in your life work. Stop it. Read what an Iowa man said when he woke up one morning and found he had a new face:

"By George, I never saw anything like it. There I've been for three years trying to get rid of pimples and blackheads, and guess I used everything under the sun. I used your Calcium Wafers for just seven days. This morning every blessed pimple is gone and I can't find a blackhead. I could write you a volume of thanks. I am so grateful to you."

Just send us your name and address in full, today, and we will send you a trial package of Stuart's Calcium Wafers, free to test. After you have tried the sample and been convinced that all we say is true, you will go to your nearest druggist and get a 50c box and be cured of your facial trouble. They are in tablet form, and no trouble whatever to take. You go about your work as usual, and there you are—cured and happy.

Send us your name and address today and we will at once send you by mail a sample package free. Address F. A. Stuart Co., 175 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

Stated communication of Manitou lodge No. 68, A. F. & A. M., will be held Friday night.

The Ladies Missionary society of the First Christian church met Tuesday afternoon, April 7. After the transaction of routine business an excellent program was rendered. The president, Mrs. Walsh, read a paper and there was a "quiz" on the work of the Christian missionaries in India. The attendance at these meetings is gratifyingly large and shows that there is a growing interest in the work.

The ladies of section one of the First Christian church held an Easter social and basket tea Friday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Roscoe C. Hill, 20 East Cache la Poudre street. There was a large attendance, church members and outsiders being represented. The dainty novelties and useful articles found ready purchasers. Mrs. Cobb received the prize, a collection of household hints, contributed by the members of the section, for guessing the largest number of words represented by a descriptive reading. Easter decorations beautified the rooms and the serving table was gay with red and white carnations and ferns. Mrs. James Maltley served the ices and Mrs. Glossop poured tea. Assisting were Mrs. A. L. Burris, Mrs. J. W. Garrett, Mrs. F. M. Marks and Mrs. Thompson.

The Golden Sunshine society will meet at the home of Mrs. Willis L. Kirkwood, 1408 South Nevada avenue, tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. All ladies who are interested in this work are invited to attend.

Hermione, Temple No. 1, Pythian Sisters, will meet in K. of P. hall, Tuesday evening, at 7:30 o'clock. All members of the degree staff are requested to be present, as there will be initiations. All members and visiting sisters are invited.

ORGANIZED—The El Paso County Pharmaceutical society was organized at a dinner held in McRae's cafe, Thursday evening. About twenty-seven druggists attended. The following officers were elected: D. Y. Butcher, president; W. Donaldson, vice president; A. R. Paris, secretary-treasurer.

NO MORE BALD HEADS

Keene, the Hair Specialist, Says Baldness Is Unnecessary and Proves It.

The interest incident to the wonderful work that is being accomplished in Baltimore by William Chas. Keene, President of the Lorrimer Institute, continues unabated. Many cases of baldness and faded hair of years' standing have been remedied by the remarkable preparation which is being distributed from Mr. Keene's laboratory, and its fame is spreading far and wide. As a consequence, hundreds of persons are using this remarkable hair food with gratifying results.

What seems to make this treatment more popular is the fact that free trial outfits are sent by mail prepaid. Those who wish to try it are strongly advised to write to Mr. Keene at the Lorrimer Institute, Branch 116, Baltimore, Md. They will receive the full trial outfit free of charge and much useful information about the hair which will put them on the road to a rapid and certain improvement.

Manitou News

The weekly meeting of the Ladies' Aid society was held last Thursday afternoon at the Pittsburg hotel, Miss A. Fellows acting as hostess. After the opening scripture verse which was read by the president and the several committees reported, a letter was read from Gen. William J. Palmer which denoted his willingness to give $25 to the ladies with which they might paint the parsonage. The society now has $55 on hand for this purpose. After the remaining $15 has been raised among the ladies the painting of the parsonage will begin.

On Tuesday evening the Hospital guild will hold a meeting at the home of Mrs. S. J. Davis.

Last Thursday evening Mrs. O. P. Snyder was hostess at a 6 o'clock dinner for six guests.

Mrs. Herman Reese, who has spent the most of the winter in the east, has returned to her home on Canon avenue where she will remain for the summer.

Friday afternoon Mrs. J. E. Laycock entertained her Sunday school class at her home on Canon avenue.

On Thursday evening of last week, which was her fourteenth birthday, Miss Harriet Reno entertained several of her schoolmates at her home on Grand avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Austin, who have been visiting their daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Kirby, for the last two weeks, have returned to their home in the east.

Mrs. W. Barker, who spent two or three days in Victor last week, returned last week Tuesday.

J. C. Hoestand is remodeling the dancing pavilion and will convert it into a vaudeville and moving picture show house. It will be well ventilated and fitted with all modern conveniences. The grounds surrounding the pavilion are being parked and planted with flowers of all kinds.

A party of 60 Raymond-Whitcomb excursionists are at the Cliff House. They came in last night and will stay until Tuesday. The party is in charge of Frank A. Hammond of Boston and are principally from Massachusetts and Maine. Count St. George of Switzerland is a member of the party and is very much impressed with Colorado and especially with Manitou and vicinity.

A new stone arch bridge is being erected at Soda Springs park connecting the street with the new bandstand in the park. Three hundred new seats have been placed in the park and 500 maple, elm and box elder trees have been set out this spring. Several new buildings have been constructed and others are in course of construction.

In all parts of the town much improvement is going on in preparation for the tourist trade which is expected earlier this season than usual.

CRYSTAL THEATER OPEN TO THE PUBLIC

Mr. Graves opened the Crystal theater at 11 South Tejon last night. The first show crowded the house to its capacity, and the crowd continued to come until the close, at 11 p. m. The new theater is a little beauty and deserving of a good patronage, for the class of entertainment given last night was of the highest order, and no expense will be spared to maintain the same standard in the future. The program last night will be repeated Monday, and is as follows:

Moore and Greaves Circus.
Peculiar Pumpkins.
Cabman's Delusion.
Discharging the Maid.
Magic of Music.
Song, illustrated: "Dolly, Dear."

Mr. Jack Begley of Denver is singing the illustrated songs, and he possesses a rich, melodious voice, and was received at every performance with great favor.

Tuesday the program will be changed and a film of the Passion Play will be given. This film is of much interest to the church-going public, and is very appropriate at this season of the year.

CHANGE OF PROGRAM AT FAIRYLAND

Yesterday was the banner day at Fairyland. The crowds simply could not be accommodated at some of the performances. The moving pictures in color are a decided novelty for Colorado Springs theater-goers. Next Monday and Tuesday, Mysterious Armor, in colors, will be the feature film, and nothing finer has ever been shown west of Chicago. Funny Fisheries in Sicily is also a very popular film, and, with Phlegmatic Gentlemen and Gypsies' Revenge, complete the picture program. Harry Van will sing "San Antonio," accompanied by new pictures, which are very beautiful. If you failed to see the Jerusalem pictures last week, you missed a treat, and it is hoped that Manager Braden will be able to get this popular film again, for it was one of the finest and the most instructive films ever presented to a Colorado Springs audience.

The chairs now used at Fairyland will soon be replaced by handsome new opera chairs, which will add greatly to the beauty of the auditorium and the comfort of its patrons.

A man may acquire the habit of taking everything as it comes from dining at a table d'hote.

Is Your Wardrobe Complete for Easter?

and the spring season? If not, we would suggest that the time for preparation is growing very short. See us early this week.

There's One Suit Store in Colorado Springs That Can Satisfactorily Supply Your Every Want in Wearing Apparel, Millinery and Furnishings

The most effective costumes, suits, dresses, waists and hats for all occasions are here in greatest assortment. Dozens of exclusive models. Choosing here is done with the least amount of trouble, at the least possible expense and to the entire satisfaction of the buyer. The things we sell look good to you and consequently what you buy here looks good to your friends and acquaintances. We take as much pride in turning out becoming garments and hats as any women does in wearing them. Our garments have a well-deserved reputation of being absolutely perfect in fit and finish when delivered to our patrons.

Lingerie Dresses
$5.85 to $67.50

Linen and Other Wash Suits
$7.50 to $40.00

The above prices show some idea of the range we show in popular and high class garments of this class. If there's a desirable thing on the market that cannot be found here the chances are much against seeing it elsewhere in Colorado Springs.

Wilbur Hats
Always Satisfactory

If there's a doubt in your mind as to the correctness of the millinery you have been wearing, if there's something lacking—if there's a neglect of detail in the work—an absence of character, a disregard of pleasing color combinations—in fact, any little defect so common in the average millinery, let us get up this season's headwear for you. We employ people who know in both the buying and the selling of our hats and are certain to please you. Wilbur hats never cause unfavorable comment.

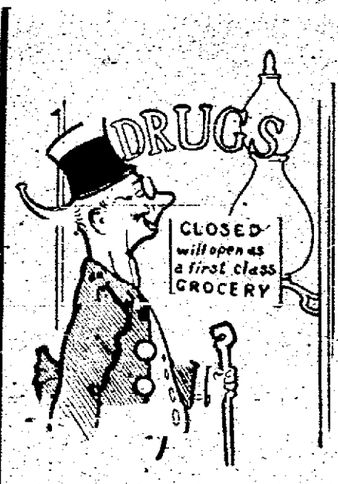

Prices range, $3.00 to $65.00.

Silk Costumes
$35.00 to $225.00

Suits and Dresses
$17.00 to $65.00

We represent the greatest manufacturer of silk garments in the United States and offer at all times the best possible value for a given price. Our showing of silk goods this season is greater than ever before, which is saying much. Look through at any time.

Food Foolishness

The druggist lives on your "food follies." If every one ate the druggist would have to turn grocer. There's no stomach so weak that it cannot digest FORCE. Its thin, crisp flakes are quickly penetrated by the digestive fluids and the barley-malt enables the intestines to digest the starch. FORCE helps Nature. Not a medicine, but a food.

"FORCE"

"FORCE" is made of the best white wheat, steam-cooked, rolled into thin flakes, combined with the purest barley-malt and baked. Always "crisp" it before serving it by pouring into a pan and warming it in oven. Then serve in large dish with cream, piling the flakes in one side of the dish and pouring the cream in the other side, dipping the flakes as eaten.

Your Grocer sells it. No other Flaked Food is "Just as Good."

"Death and Life," by Harry Rowe Shelley, a Good Friday and Easter cantata will be given on Friday evening in the First M. E. church by the Columbine Choral club under the direction of Dr. Charles Woolsey of Colorado Springs. The club will be assisted by several well-known soloists.

Contrary to the general belief, the bonds furnished by the various city officers did not run out with the end of the fiscal year March 31, 1908. These bonds were drawn up for the full term of office, and therefore do not expire until next spring. Chief of Police E. N. Wolfe has filed his bond with the city clerk.

The city clerk yesterday morning issued a check for $600 and a note for $1,500 and turned them over to Anthony Bott in payment for the cemetery lots which the council purchased from Mr. Bott at the last council meeting. The note bears 6 per cent interest, payable in five years. It is probable that the sum will be paid before the time expires.

The police department yesterday morning rounded up three boys for stealing. The boys are all under age, and promised to never steal again. They were released by Chief Wolfe after he received all the articles they had stolen. Among the things returned were many valuable tools. They had a whole kit of tools from one place and many other separate tools from other places. As the chief had located the owners of most of the stuff, he returned it to them. He took the names of the boys and will turn them over to Juvenile Officer Reasoner of Colorado Springs, if they commit any more crimes.

CAN'T PAY MORE—Officers of the Central Power company state that unless the men who went on strike at their construction work at Shoshone recently return to work at the prevailing scale, the company will import men to do the work. The men demand the same scale that prevailed before the financial flurry, but the company states that it is unable to pay the former scale and that it can secure all the men needed at the prices it is willing to pay.

Jewelry Novelties for Easter

We are showing a nice line of Jewelry Novelties, in plain and art effects, including Veil Pins, Barrettes, Waist Pins, Collar Pins, Belt Buckles, Belt Pins, Hat Pins, Metal Purses, etc., at popular prices.

HIBBARDS

Fowne and Kayser Silk Gloves

We are ready for Easter shoppers with complete lines of 12 and 16-button length, as well as short silk gloves of the very best makes in first qualities. Black, white, Copenhagen, Carolle and all leading shades.

Harbingers of Easter fill the Hibbard Store with interest in every section. The showings are the most brilliant and extensive we ever made. Never before, it seems, was there choice from so many beautiful things, and at the same time, never before were there so many extraordinary values. It is a fact well worth noting, that real Economy Opportunities are more in evidence here now than at any previous Easter season.

It is UNFAILING RELIABILITY quite as much as the beauty and distinction of new goods that makes the Hibbard Store a good one to pin faith to. When you buy something here under price whether it is Gloves, Hosiery, Silks, Linens, Garments, Millinery, Carpets, Draperies, or something else—the surety of PERMANENT SATISFACTION is always a part of the transaction. We welcome you to view these special, exquisite displays of Millinery, Garments, Fabrics and Dress Accessories of every sort, also the new arrivals in household necessities and fixings for home furnishing, such as Carpets, Draperies, Rugs, etc.

Exquisite and Exclusive Easter Millinery

Particular Attention Given to Ordered and Make-Over Work

THE DISPLAY OF EASTER MILLINERY this week affords the prospective shopper an unexcelled opportunity to see the most extensive showing of exclusive trimmed and untrimmed hats of the season; styles are now definitely decided for spring and summer, and assortments are now more extensive than they will be after Easter—everything in the millinery line is now at its best.

Our Millinery Department is a complete millinery store in itself—a millinery store for all; stocks here include everything from the simplest and most inexpensive styles to the more elaborate models such as are shown in the exclusive shop; but prices here are from a fourth to a half less. Even at $2.00 and $3.00 we offer a wide range of attractive styles far superior in beauty and quality of materials than hats sold elsewhere at such prices. In fact, no matter how little the sum you have to invest, you can come here and make your selections with absolute certainty of finding a style that will perfectly become and delight you something better than you can find elsewhere for the same money else we would not take it upon ourselves to praise our less expensive hats.

The Untrimmed Hats This season's shapes are so new and so "different" that every woman who sees them and tries their becomingness over her own face longs to get at the trimming of them. There are Chips, Tuscans, Milans, rough Braids, fine Neapolitans and big Leghorns in large sailor shapes, high crowned effects, smart little Turbans, and other 1908 styles in such shapes known as "The Merry Widow," "The Monmouth," "The Orient," "The Pasadena," "The Elinor," "The Parader," "The Torreador," "The Alpine," "The Monarka" and "The Randall."

Hat Trimmings and Millinery Supplies Unusual assortments of hat trimmings of every sort are here, including foliage, flowers, feathers, wings, breasts, bird heads, aigrettes, ribbons, velvets and ornaments, in the new cerise, biondin, Copenhagen and other leading shades and colors.

Millinery Special Tomorrow morning we will place on a separate table about thirty choice trimmed hats in the newest spring and summer styles; regular value up to $10.00. Easter Week 5.00

An Innovation Garments for Little Women

Suits, Skirts and Jackets for Women Smaller Than the Average

JUST IN TIME FOR EASTER we announce this innovation. There has always been much ado about little women smaller than the average—buying ready-to-wear garments exactly suited to their requirements in both size and suitability of style.

We take particular pride in calling to notice, today, the fact that this store is now prepared to cope with the needs and requirements of little women as well as average and large women; for some time past we have planned on this announcement, and tomorrow we will be ready for all those included in this class.

Here you will find an extensive showing of all those new and exclusive effects that express the correct fashion trend of current modes for Easter, embracing smartest New York Styles in Suits, Skirts and Coats for all womankind. There are distinctive style points about the ready-to-wear garments shown at Hibbard's, that are never seen outside this store. That is one of the vital reasons why Hibbard styles are accepted and worn by the smartest dressers in Colorado Springs.

Little Women's Suits—Little Women's Suits in bust measures 30 to 34. Smart, attractive styles with long and short jackets, made in the new square, round and dip front effects. Admittance to the Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday evening dancing parties are by invitation only, which may be had by applying to the professor at the hall any week day and giving satisfactory references. The floor is in perfect condition and the popular Fink brothers' orchestra furnish the music. Prof. Cox will make special effort to see that strangers are entertained.

"INSPIRATION FROM BEHIND."

But This Speaker Got Most of His From the Front.

When Todd Marc Pettigrew, "manufacturer of smiles, grins, snickers, giggles and guffaws, made to fit any face," appeared on the platform at Perkins hall last night, to deliver a lecture on "Inspiration From Behind," he was the recipient of a surprise on the part of his college mates. Pettigrew is a Colorado College man and, naturally, was expecting a warm reception from the students. He got it.

The college students were in the best of spirits because of their baseball victory over the Boulder nine on Washburn field. They had secured the front seats in Perkins hall and were looking for a chance to "start something." One of their number, who enjoys a campus reputation as a humorist and practical joker, led the assault on Pettigrew. When the latter began to manufacture his smiles and other things, the campus humorist also got busy and in a short time had routed the speaker. This was the signal for a general outburst, and the selection of vegetable and other things that showered upon the stage was indescribable.

Having vented their "college spirit" the students left the hall, leaving Mr. Pettigrew to continue as best he could. The lecture was well attended and thoroughly enjoyed.

DOCTOR THE SKIN TO CURE THE SKIN

Scientific Study Proves Eczema Cannot Be Treated by Dosing the Stomach With Drugs.

Advanced medical science, after years of study and research, is now practically agreed that Eczema, psoriasis, salt rheum and diseases of like nature are skin diseases and cannot be cured by doctoring the blood. The treatment prescribed is the direct application of healing, soothing remedies to the skin.

"Doctor the itch where the itch is"—such is the common sense as well as scientifically correct conclusion. Oil of wintergreen, compounded with such other soothing vegetable remedies as glycerine and thymol in D. D. D. Prescription, is recognized as the specific. Physicians use D. D. D. Prescription freely in their practice. Dr. C. A. V. Hartleben, Washington, D. C., writes as follows:

"D. D. D. Prescription is medicinal, soothing, and the effect is miraculous. God knows it saved me a deal of suffering. I recommend it to everyone I can."

This letter is only one of many testifying to the merits of this purely vegetable remedy. Copies of other letters may be seen at our store. Robinson Drug Co. Free treatise on care and nutrition of the skin may be had on application.

FREE BOOK ABOUT CANCER.

CANCEROL has proved its merits in the treatment of cancer. It is not in an experimental stage. Records of undisputed cures of cancer in nearly every part of the body are contained in Dr. Leach's new 100-page book. This book also tells the cause of cancer and instructs in the care of the patient; tells what to do in case of bleeding, pain, odor, etc. A valuable guide in the treatment of any case. S.S.S. REMOVES BLOOD HUMORS

When the blood becomes infected with unhealthy humors the effect is shown on the skin in the form of pimples, rashes, eruptions, or some other type of skin disease. These humors circulating in the blood, come in contact with the delicate tissues and fibres of the skin and produce irritation and inflammation, and often excessive itching and burning. Trying to cure skin troubles with external applications is treating the effect instead of the cause. Such treatment perhaps allays some of the itching and discomfort, but does not reach the blood where the real source of troubles lies. A thorough cleansing of the blood is the only cure for humors in the blood. S. S. S., a gentle acting, safe blood purifier, is the proper treatment. It goes down into the circulation and neutralizes the humors and removes them from the blood. S. S. S. supplies the blood with the fresh, healthy properties necessary to sustain the skin and keep it free from disease. S. S. S. cures Eczema, Tetter, Acne, Salt Rheum, pimples, boils, rashes, and all other skin affections and diseases, because it purifies the blood and removes the humors which are responsible for the trouble. TIGERS OUTPLAY STATE UNIVERSITY NINE AND WIN THE OPENING GAME, 7-2.

BRITT FLOORED 3 TIMES

PACKY McFARLAND WINS EASY VICTORY IN SIXTH.

Californian Was Not the Fighter of Old—Declares That He Will Never Enter Ring Again

COLMA ARENA, SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., April 11.—Packy McFarland, the Chicago lightweight, made short work of Jimmy Britt this afternoon in their scheduled 20-round contest. Britt was sent to the floor three times in the sixth and last round by powerful right wallops on the point of the jaw. He took the count of nine twice, and after the timekeeper had counted five, Britt's father jumped into the ring and waved McFarland away. It was practically a clean knock out. McFarland outclassed Britt from start to finish.

The Britt who faced McFarland this afternoon was not the Britt of old. He did not seem able to gauge his blows and displayed much weakness in the clinches and close-range fighting. McFarland, on the other hand, had remarkable speed; his judgment of distance was infallible, and he displayed great punching power. McFarland showed also that he is a wonderful two-handed fighter.

Had Britt at His Mercy.

In the first and second rounds McFarland outboxed, outpunched and completely outgeneraled his opponent. During the third, fourth and fifth rounds McFarland administered a succession of powerful rights on Britt's jaw. Toward the close of the fifth, a right smash flush to the jaw sent Britt to the mat, and only the timely clang of the gong saved him from being counted out.

In the sixth, McFarland unhooked a wicked right that caught Britt on the point of the chin. He dropped like a log. At the count of nine he struggled to his feet, but McFarland was right after him, and another right in the same place sent the Californian down. It was then that the elder Britt stepped into the ring and acknowledged defeat for his son.

After the fight, Britt stammered out:

"I was clearly beaten. This is the last time I ever will box in a prize ring."

The Fight by Rounds.

Round One—Britt led and was blocked. They clinched. Britt tried again and again to land, but missed. Jimmy got in with light left on the face. They clinched and McFarland put in a right to the stomach. Mac showed cleverness in getting away from Britt's left body blows. Britt threw himself to the floor from swinging with left and right. Britt brought in a hard left on the stomach, and they clinched. Mac seemed to be simply sparring and boxing with caution.

Round Two—Britt led with a left and they clinched. McFarland uppercut Britt with the right while holding. Britt led a light left to face and followed it several times. Britt threw a left into the stomach and they clinched again. There was clever blocking on both sides. Packey led to the face with two stiff uppercuts in a clinch and used both hands on the side of the head. When the bell rang the men were in a clinch.

Round Three—McFarland put in a stiff left to the face and Britt countered. Packey brought the right across his face and Jimmy scored a hard right on the face a second later. Britt sent home a punishing left swing on the stomach. Mac scored with a left stab on the face and followed with a right on the chin. They clinched near the ropes and Welch broke them. They clinched again and McFarland pulled Britt's guard arm away to clear the way for a right swing. There was a mixup at the close, McFarland sending in teasing uppercuts with both hands. Then Mac hammered Britt across the ring and into a corner, punishing him with both hands. The round was McFarland's.

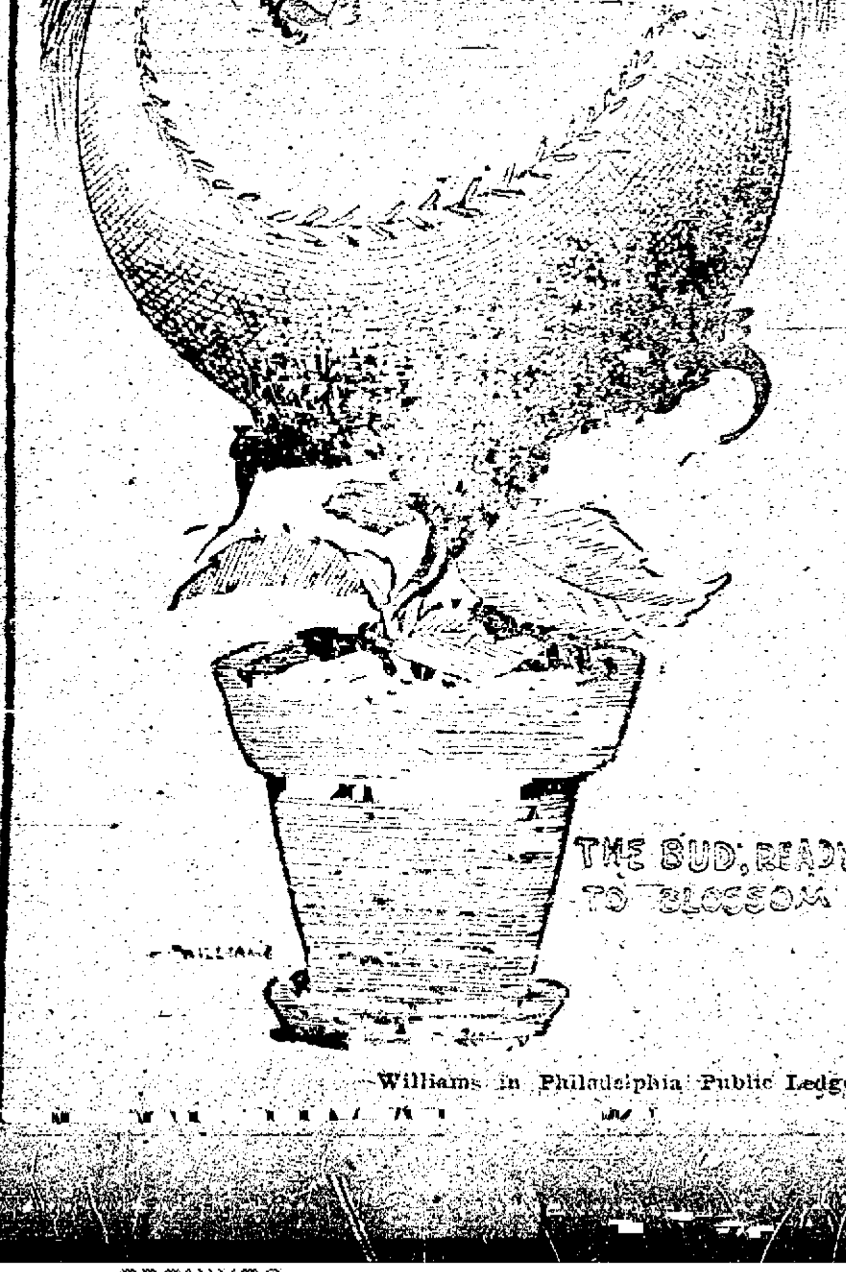

Britt Floored; Saved by Gong.

Round Four—McFarland swung a straight left and blocked Britt's left body blows. Packey blocked a left swing to the head and got in a right uppercut. Britt smashed in a left-handed blow as Packey was going away. They worked into a corner and each got in a right on the body. Mac seemed to be gaining the upperhand. Mac got away from a right swing and battered Jimmy to the ropes with both fists, every blow being a clean one.

Jimmy's head was tossing, and he seemed tired. Britt scored with a right for the head, and Mac countered in a similar manner and sent in a right to the jaw. The bell rang while Britt was on the floor and the gong saved him.

Round Five—McFarland cut loose and hammered Britt until Jimmy's back was bent over the ropes. Britt got away and they clinched. Welch broke them and Britt tried a swinging right for the jaw. McFarland avoided a right swing and a volley of lefts and forced Jimmy to clinch. When Welch broke them Britt came in with two right swings. McFarland kept very cool and hammered Britt along one side of the ring and smashed Britt on the jaw repeatedly. It looked bad for Britt when the bell rang.

Round Six—They gave Britt a jolt of whisky as he sat in his corner. Britt rushed at his man and McFarland protected himself by covering and blocking. Then McFarland cut loose, beating Britt back with rights and lefts on the head. McFarland got in a stiff uppercut in a clinch and then battered Britt all over the ring, knocking him down with a right. Britt arose. He was game, but helpless, and McFarland floored him again. Britt was under the ropes struggling to rise while the count was going on. He was knocked down three times in all and struggled gritily to gain his feet. His father, ... acknowledged defeat for his son. The referee patted McFarland on the shoulder. McFarland tore around the ring like a colt, shaking hands with his friends and admirers.

DICKERSON IS COMING

HERE TOMORROW IN INTEREST OF BALL TEAM.

To Consider Sites for Park—New Manager a Man of Great Experience in Baseball Affairs.

E. W. Dickerson, who will manage the Colorado Springs baseball team in the Colorado State league, will, with President Alfred Damon Runyon of the league, visit Colorado Springs tomorrow and remain here several days getting things lined up for the opening of the season.

Chief among the propositions to be considered is that regarding the new park. It is hoped that some definite action can be taken in regard to the proposition of Alderman J. J. Coughlin for a park adjoining the Zoo. Another proposition is to be considered, that of building a park on the street car line just north of the Rock Island bridge.

Mr. Dickerson plans to devote much of his time to the personal management of the team, and, if necessary, will come here for that purpose. Associated with him will be H. R. Hahn of this city.

After Joe Ganzel.

For playing captain and manager, Dickerson expects to sign Joe Ganzel, brother of John Ganzel of the Cincinnati National league team. Joe Ganzel has had a great deal of experience as a baseball manager, having won the pennant with Grand Rapids once and also with the Ionia team in the Michigan State league, and the Flint, Mich., team in the Interstate association. He is a first baseman and last year stood second in fielding among Central league first basemen.

Dickerson himself is a man of wide experience in the baseball world. Although he has not been in active participation for the last five years, he spent a number of years as player, manager and league president. He has been president of the Interstate, International and Michigan state leagues. He owned the Grand Rapids team in the Central league for five years. For 12 years he played second base in the New England, Interstate, Michigan, International and Southern leagues.

He is one of the most experienced baseball men in the west, and his taking hold of the management of the Colorado Springs team will be welcomed by the fans. With Dickerson at the helm a first-class team is assured. Already he has lined up a number of eastern men who have been playing through the central states.

BOULDER CLAIMS TRACK TITLE

Thinks It Is Entitled to Championship Because of Refusal to Meet Rivals.

BOULDER, April 11.—The invitation track meet for May 9 at the University of Colorado has been called off. As matters now stand it is most evident that all of the schools in the state will not get together this year at one meet and therefore the matter of the championship will not be fought out.

Till all of the schools of higher learning do get together on one field the title of champion will remain with the school which has held it for the last several years. And while Colorado would much rather defend the title than hold it by default the fact remains that for another year the men of the Silver and Gold are champions on the track and field.

Should The championship of Colorado will be decided at the intercollegiate track and field meet to be held on Washburn field on May 16. The University of Colorado was invited to attend this meet before it issued invitations for its own meet. If it does not see fit to attend, it has no claim on the title. If Boulder thinks itself bigger than the rest of the state, it will get an awful jarring before long.

JAY GOULD DEFENDS TITLE

Defeats E. H. Miles in Court Tennis Match.

NEW YORK, April 11.—Jay Gould successfully defended his title for the year as national champion of court tennis at the New York Racquet and Tennis club today. His opponent in the challenge round was Eustace H. Miles of London, whom Gould beat last year at the Queen's club, London, in the challenge round of the British court tennis championship.

Gould throughout had the better of the game, but Miles continued to drive for the winning opening. Gould won the match three sets to one. The scores were 6-2, 6-1, 1-6, 6-3. Gould was the favorite in the betting.

The Chicago Yacht club, on behalf of the former Detroit yacht Spray, has accepted the challenge of the Boston yachtsmen to races for 21-foot boats. They stipulate that the race be sailed off Chicago under Lake Michigan rules, beginning about July 4.

TIGERS WIN, 7-2

DEFEAT BOULDER IN FIRST CHAMPIONSHIP GAME.

BETTER IN ALL DEPARTMENTS

Hyder, Schmid, Sherry and Siddons Mainly Responsible for Victory, Although Wasson Helped Some in Seventh—Game Exciting.

K. Lee Hyder, a box artist of some ability and much nerve, taught the University of Colorado a much-needed lesson yesterday afternoon. He was ably assisted by a corps of young men who study at Colorado College and play baseball on Washburn field, chief among whom were Captain H. Schmid, who always smiles and dotes on bases on balls, A. Sherry, the little boy who was introduced to the Boulderites on November 9 last, and Siddons, the hitting kid.

The score was 7 to 2, and the Tigers won.

They outplayed the Boulderites at every department of the game.

Castleman's bunch left the field in deep gloom, while the college bell pealed out the news.

Not only did the Tigers and all their supporters have reason to rejoice over their performance yesterday afternoon, but their joy had a right to overstep all bounds, when the fact that this is the first time in three years that the Boulder baseball nine has been walloped by the Tigers. Of course, there are those two football victories, but that is another story.

Wasson Not Entirely to Blame.

One thousand baseball fans saw the game and went wild over it, as fans are apt to do when they see a hard-fought and exciting match that has a great deal of action and a few spectacular plays.

CAPTAIN "HEINE" SCHMID,
Tiger Third Baseman Whose Playing Was an Important Factor in Boulder's Downfall.

After the first few innings, which were nip and tuck, the Tigers clearly had all the best of it. They demonstrated their superiority at every stage; showed that they were harder sluggers and surer and better fielders, knew better how to use what baseball they knew, and proved that they had the better man in the pitcher's box. Of course Wasson, the Boulder pitcher, who went up in the air in the seventh and was replaced by Ballinger, had a great deal to do with the Tiger victory, but the State university's defeat was due largely to the superior playing of its opponents.

There was some interesting preliminary skirmishing in the first few innings. Hyder, who got on from bad to worse ... the game, began by fanning out three Boulderites, although a ... was sandwiched in between. The Tigers got a couple of men on bases with one out, but could not score. The Boulderites led off in the second with a couple of hits, but Snyder was nipped at the home plate.

Errors Allow First Run.

In the third inning came the first blood. Deesz threw the ball over Devine's head when he failed to hold Matthews' third strike, and the latter got to second. Then Bernard came to bat and spat a long one to center. Van Stone got under it after some racing but let the ball drop, and Bernard went to third while Matthews scored. "Sil" was nabbed at the home plate when Schmid nailed Garst's drive in time to shoot it to Deesz.

After this not a single Tiger made an error. In their half of the inning they jumped into the lead with two runs. Wasson walked both Schmid and Morris. Then Siddons swung his trusty bat on a ball that soared too high for Bernard to reach it, and scored Schmid. Morris was scored on Sherry's sacrifice, but Siddons was caught too far off third, and the run-getting in this inning ended.

Boulder Ties Score.

Boulder tied the score in the fourth, when Snyder hit over second, advanced on Haley's sacrifice and scored on Anderson's single to right. A brilliant double from Schmid to Devine and back to Schmid corked up this inning.

Another double was negotiated by the Tigers in the sixth, in which Schmid, Jones and Devine figured. In the second session of this inning Sherry got a run, over which the Boulderites were inclined to hold a powwow with Umpire Valleley, but the score counted. Sherry hit to left and went to second on Devine's single to center. Hyder's base on balls sent him up another notch, and while the Boulder infield was throwing the ball around in an effort to get him to try his luck on a steal home, he turned the same trick, and scored. With two men on bases and only one out, Van Stone struck out, but the catcher missed the ball and the runners started to advance. Devine got to third safely but Hyder was out at second. This double served only to delay the Tiger run-getting for another inning.

When the Game Was Won.

Schmid was the first man up in the seventh. He was given his third successive base on balls, and took second on Morris' bunt, going to third when Wasson threw the ball to Anderson. Siddons and his timely bat again came upon the scene and the hit to right that was the result, scored both Schmid and Morris. When Deesz singled past second, Siddons overslid third and was counted out by Bernard. Deesz went to third on an error by Garst, and was scored by Devine's long fly to right, which, under the new rule, counts as a sacrifice.

In the next inning Wasson changed places with Ballinger, and the latter shut the gates, although he let the Schmid-Morris combination on bases. Boulder's effort to retrieve lost ground in the last two innings were unavailing, for Hyder and his teammates did not let up for a minute.

The Boulder Stars.

The Boulder men who played the best were Captain Snyder, who was a power at bat; Bernard, who played a good game at third; Haley, who caught well, and Matthews, who nailed a couple of good ones that came into right field.

Besides the Tigers mentioned in the first paragraph, Deesz deserves credit for his work behind the bat, Devine for his playing at first, and Morris for his work on the bases. Siddons' timely hitting deserves remention.

BASEBALL SEASON HERE

LEAGUES THROUGHOUT COUNTRY OPEN THIS WEEK.

Majors Play First Games on Tuesday, Western Begins on Wednesday. The Schedules.

The baseball season is here. Throughout the nation this week the teams in the major and the minor leagues will get into action, and when the umpires call "Play Ball" for the first championship games on the various circuits, they will inaugurate a season which promises to be one of the greatest in the history of organized ball.

The American and National leagues will open on Tuesday with the following games scheduled:

NATIONAL LEAGUE.
Boston at Brooklyn.
New York at Philadelphia.
Pittsburg at St. Louis.
Chicago at Cincinnati.

AMERICAN LEAGUE.
St. Louis at Cleveland.
Washington at Boston.
Philadelphia at New York.
Detroit at Chicago.

All of the major league teams have returned from their southern training trips in good condition. That Chicago will repeat its performance in 1906, when it won the championship in both leagues, is the prediction of many. President Murphy of the Chicago National league team announces that the league pennant will be unfurled April 22.

In the Western league the teams will open on Wednesday, as follows:
Pueblo at Denver.
Des Moines at Omaha.
Sioux City at Lincoln.

From all reports, the various teams in the Western are as strong or stronger than last year, although the race for the pennant will assume a different aspect.

That clinking sound is the large consignment of goods from the cannery for the unavailable b. b. talent.

TWO GOOD GAMES THIS WEEK

Tigers Meet Rock Island and Sacred Heart.—Terrors Go to Pueblo.

The Tigers have two good baseball games on this week. On Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock, they will meet the fast Rock Island amateur aggregation which has been playing havoc with the High School Terrors, Cutler academy and other local nines. This game should be full of interest.

The Saturday game will be with Sacred Heart college of Denver. The Tigers opened their Denver trip with this fast bunch, losing by a score of 8 to 5 in a close game. They are eager for revenge and believe that they can retrieve lost laurels.

On Saturday, the High School Terrors will go to Pueblo where they will play the first game of their interscholastic schedule. Their opponents will be Pueblo Centennial High school, old-time rivals. Coach Hill and Captain Murphy believe the team will give the Pueblans a hard rub.

NEW BOYS' LEAGUE PLANNED

Miss Henry Has Several Teams Organized.—Results in Strong Games.

A new baseball league for boys averaging around 14 years is shortly to be organized. The team is to be known as Miss Henry's league and will be organized on lines similar to those upon which the Strang boys' leagues are conducted. Miss Henry already has six or eight teams which want to join the league.

In the Strang leagues the results of yesterday's games were as follows:

Senior league—West Sides, 1; Second Cutler academy, 12. The game between the East Sides and the Deaf and Blind team was postponed until next Sunday.

Junior league—Boys' club, 14; San Luis, 5; Little Terrors, 11; Winn's team, 8.

Junior league No. 2—Boulder Sluggers, 14; Little East Sides, 10; Bristols, 20; Kiowa Sluggers, 12.

CLUB MEN IN POOL TOURNEY

Denver and El Paso Clubs Will Meet Here Wednesday Evening.

The whist tourney having been completed, the Denver and El Paso clubs will meet in a pool tournament on Wednesday of this week. The tournament will be held at the El Paso club, three men representing each club. The Denver players will be Messrs. Black, Gross and Kavendar, while the local men, who have been selected in a tournament just completed, are C. W. Davis, F. M. P. Taylor and F. L. Ballard.

AGGIES WALLOP DENVER

Score of 17 to 1 Shows Relative Strength of Teams.

Special to The Gazette.

DENVER, April 11.—Colorado Agricultural college today swamped the Denver university baseball team by winning its first intercollegiate baseball game. The score was 17 to 1, and, as it indicates, the Denverites were wholly incapable of coping with the Aggies in any department of the game.

NEW GOLF LINKS UNDER WAY

Water System Is Now Being Constructed—Work Will Require One Year.

Work on the new golf links, which are being laid out over a portion of the present Town and Gown course by the Suburban Land and Water company, has been under way for the last two weeks, and already much progress has been made. Thus far the work has been largely confined to the preliminary work on the irrigation system, including the laying out of the ditches and reservoirs, the establishment of boundaries, building fences and the like.

The new course, which is to be about 6,000 yards in length, has been surveyed and staked out, the location of the 18 holes having been determined. The work has been done under the direction of the members of the club, many of whom are expert golfers. The new course will be the finest in the west when completed, which will not be for about a year.

ROCK ISLANDS BEAT CUTLER

Place Hits Where They Are Needed: Score 12 to 4.

Superior batting ability, which placed hits where they were needed, won the game with Cutler Academy for the fast Rock Island team, on Washburn field, yesterday morning. The score was 12 to 4. Cutler got eight hits, while its star twirler, McGowan, gave 10. McGowan and Champion of Cutler each secured a home run.

The lineup:

SNOWFIELDS ARE IMPASSABLE

Change of Program in New York to Paris Race Is Necessary.

NEW YORK, April 11.—A change of program in the New York to Paris automobile race is likely to occur according to advices received here. The American car which was far in the lead has found the snow fields of Alaska an impassable barrier to further progress in that direction and is therefore returning from Valdez to Seattle. The French and Italian machines also were on their way to Seattle by steamer but they are bound up from the south having reached San Francisco only a few days ago hundreds of miles behind the American car.

The possibility of such a change in plans was foreseen some time ago by the directors of the long race, when the cars were so greatly delayed by the exceptional weather conditions encountered in the United States.

It was feared that the Alaskan trails might be found impassable at the approach of warm weather and two weeks ago an agreement was made that in such an event, the leading cars would make the trip by an alternative route. This plan provides that the machines shall go as far as possible over the original route and then sail from Seattle for Vladivostok and thence proceed by land across Siberia and Europe to their destination.

The German car, after having been isolated for a week in the desert region bordering on Nevada arrived in Ogden on a flat car from Kelton this morning to be repaired and again started west on the New York to Paris race.

TRACK TRYOUT POSTPONED.

Tigers Will Have Chance to Show Ability on Wednesday.

Because of the fact that the Tiger-Boulder baseball game was in progress on Washburn field yesterday afternoon, the home meet of the track and field athletes was postponed until Wednesday afternoon. At that time all the members of the squad, of which there are about 30, will be put through their various events in order that Coach McMahon may get a line on them in making up his final selection of the varsity team.

WAR POSSIBILITY TOPIC IN HOUSE

can do it. Let us begin by authorizing four ships this year at the least."

Mr. Burton followed and was rather inclined to discount Mr. Hobson's predictions of war.

"Notwithstanding the dire portents that the war clouds are gathering," said he, "I am gratified to notice that equanimity and contentment prevail in this chamber." He could not, he said, listen to Mr. Hobson, "without words of emphatic dissent. I may even say rebuke."

America a Peacemaker.

The United States, Mr. Burton declared, was in the forefront of modern civilization and instead of engaging in warfare had made peace between nations. He referred to President Roosevelt's part in affecting peace between Russia and Japan and said that "not one nor 20 battleships had anything to do with that peace. It was accomplished rather through a reliance in his fairness and the justice and disinterestedness of the American factors, he declared, which would have been swept away if he had had those ambitions belonging to a country having a great navy. Sympathy, he said, was a factor more potent than armaments, and no nation now could afford to impose upon a weak people. The public opinion of the civilized world, he asserted, was stronger than the armies and the navies of the proudest empire. There is, he said, a solidarity of interest among the nations of the earth such as to prove war will not be tolerated. War is practically impossible today, he said, unless some irrepressible reason for conflict exists as existed in the case of Japan and Russia.

As regards Japan, Mr. Burton said, no nation which made such leaps and bounds in so short a time had behaved with more moderation than that country. He concluded by saying that the United States should take advantage of its magnificent isolation and lead the world in the paths of peace.

W. W. Kitchin of South Carolina opposed the idea of four battleships. In his opinion an immense navy was not essential to the preservation of the Monroe doctrine.

Brownson Incident.

President Roosevelt's treament of Rear Admiral Brownson, because of his attitude with regard to the placing of a naval surgeon in charge of the hospital ship Relief, was condemned by Mr. Gill of Maryland, who charged that the President had repeatedly shown a disregard for the law and performed acts wholly illegal. A great injustice, he said, had been done Admiral Brownson. "We should demand justice and fair play," he exclaimed, "not only in precept but also in practice," and he said, "he who is loudest in preaching the square deal" should be foremost in practicing it. The country, he declared, should demand administrative respect for the law. Administrative contempt for it, he said, is not only inherently vicious, but if permitted to pass unnoticed and unchallenged, is bound to serve as a pernicious precedent for similar conduct in the future and must exert a corrupting influence upon the whole body politic."

Mr. Gill briefly touched upon politics and said that notwithstanding the President has twice asserted his determination not to be a candidate for a third term, it was currently reported that his last message was a bid for a renomination. He quoted from a topical song, the refrain running: "It's Taft or I, and that's the cry, in Washington," and said President Roosevelt's renomination would be a misfortune to the Republicans and his election for a third term a calamity to the country.

Mr. Loud of Michigan favored a naval program of two battleships each year for the next ten years. Mr. O'Connell of Massachusetts supported the four battleship proposition.

"Waste of Public Moneys."

The investigation of the navy yards at Charleston, Port Royal, Mare Island, Portsmouth, N. H.; New Orleans and Key West, by a commission appointed by the President with a view to their abandonment, was urged by Representative Lilley of Connecticut. Mr. Lilley offered a joint resolution providing for the appointment of this commission and for improvements in other yards, so as to eliminate the "waste of public moneys in the maintenance of the same."

Mr. Lilley quoted from reports made by boards of officers and former secretaries of the navy as far back as 1885, to show that the condition of the navy yards then was open to severe criticism and in fact that the reorganization of the navy department itself was desirable, if not absolutely necessary.

Mr. Lilley's resolution reads as follows:

"Whereas, There has been gross extravagance and lamentable misappropriation of public funds to the extent of more than $100,000,000 in expenditures in our navy yards and naval stations in excess of what business men would have expended to produce the same results and

"Whereas, Great economy may be effected by the federal government by the abandonment and sale of certain navy yards and naval stations, and the reorganization of others; therefore, be it

Urges Abandonment of Yards.

"Resolved, by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America, in Congress assembled, That the President shall appoint immediately after the passage of this act, a commission consisting of three members one of whom shall be a man of reputed responsibility in the management of large industrial affairs, and a retired naval officer, who has served as a chief of bureau, whose duty it shall be to report to the President and Congress upon the advisability of the abandonment and sale of the navy yards and naval station at Kittery, Me.; Port Royal and Charleston, S. C.; Key West, Fla.; New Orleans, La., and Mare Island, Cal., and to make such recommendations as they see fit for improving the organization and efficiency of navy yards and naval stations and eliminating the waste of public moneys in the maintenance of the same."

Many Discuss Question.

Others who spoke were Messrs. Dawson, Iowa, who advocated the consolidation of several bureaus of the navy department; Smith, Texas, who made a general assault on the Republican party, and Ferriss of Oklahoma, who condemned the dealings in futures in bucketshops and elsewhere in farm products.

At 5 o'clock the House recessed until 11:30 a. m. Monday.

FLORENCE ROBERTS IN COMEDY

Actress Presents Clever New Play Before Small Audience at Opera House.

Florence Roberts has been associated so long with plays of tears and high-strung emotions, that her dip into light comedy is a novelty. If the applause her efforts drew from the audience at the Opera House last night is a criterion, Miss Roberts has done well to escape from "Zira" and the like. This is her second appearance here this season. The audience last night was undeservedly small for "Sham" proved to be one of the most interesting plays produced here this season.

"Sham" is by Geraldine Bonner and Elmer B. Harris, and is a satire on New York high society. It is a well-constructed comedy, with an interesting plot. It runs smoothly and has a logical and pleasing ending. The lines are clever and sometimes even brilliant. The situations are well calculated and generally telling. Miss Roberts' work as Katherine Van Riper is as artistic as anything she has done. Her comedy is bright and spontaneous. There is no effort. But her work is not all light and gay, for there are a few serious moments, which come when Katherine realizes what a sham her life has been. Her love scenes with Tom Jaffray are done naturally and convincingly. The comedy element is predominant, despite the few more serious scenes, and Miss Roberts gives a thoroughly satisfying piece of work.

The supporting company is exceptionally strong. The best member being Thurlow Bergen, who has been seen here twice before this season—with Maude Fealy in "The Stronger Sex," and with Miss Roberts in "Zira." Bergen has excellent stage appearance, and is natural in all he does. His love scenes with Miss Roberts are delightful and his comedy work is strong.

Kate Jepson, who was with Miss Roberts in "Zira," was one of the aunts who supported Katherine, and her work is almost beyond criticism. Louis Frooff played old Jeremiah Buck, the western millionaire, and gave a good characterization of such a man, brought up in rough mining camps, detesting society and all its follies. Harry D. Gibbs as Montague Buck, the son of the millionaire, and the lover of Katherine, had a hard part which he played acceptably.

The staging was good, especially the second set. Miss Roberts wore some handsome costumes.

TWO MONTH'S TREATMENT FREE

(MEDICINES EXCEPTED)

Extended to Saturday Night

NEW YORK DOCTORS

Cut Down Time of Free Treatment and Give Notice of a Raise in Prices After May 1st.

The New York Doctors have had to bear to the pressure and cut down the time of their free treatments. Prior to this, for the past five years, these noted specialists have, from time to time, given notice that for a limited number of days they would examine all patients free and treat them free for a period of three months, except for a small fee to cover the cost of medicines. Any time during this week you can be examined free, but you can only get two months' treatment free. It is not probable that you will have another opportunity to get even two months' treatment free again for a long time, and a considerable rise in prices is promised to take place by May 1.

Perhaps you do not understand the method by which cases are taken by the New York Doctors. Here is the plan: These doctors are specialists in the chronic diseases of men, women and children. So that if you have consumption, asthma, bronchitis, catarrh of the nose and throat or catarrh of the stomach and bowels, dyspepsia or any stomach trouble, constipation or any bowel trouble, any liver kidney or bladder disease, heart disease, rheumatism, goiter, tumors or growths of any kind, eczema, any disease of the skin, St. Vitus dance, any nervous disease or any chronic disease peculiar to man or woman, you can be examined free and learn all about your condition by following this plan: Go to the Colorado Building, and take the elevator to the third floor, and the New York Doctors' offices are in suite [illegible]. Take a seat in the reception room, and you will be called into the consultation room when your turn comes. When you get into the consultation room you will be given a final examination and your condition, together with the plan of treatment in your case, will be [illegible] shown the equipment to be used in your case, and you will then [illegible] well these Doctors are equipped to treat any case, but until you see their office equipment you cannot realize how much apparatus it takes to equip an office to do the best work. It is said that there is not an office in the state so well equipped to CURE CHRONIC DISEASES as the New York Doctors' offices. You can't saw wood with a hammer, and neither can you cure chronic diseases without the proper tools to work with.

The New York Doctors depend upon their office treatment to a great extent to make their cures, but if you also need medicine, the drugs are furnished from their own laboratories, and then you know that you get pure drugs.

The New York Doctors have been in this city for nearly six years, and are very well known throughout business and social circles. The cures that they have made in [illegible] instances have seemed almost marvelous. They can count their cured patients by the hundreds and even thousands, and you will find them in almost every state in the Union.

An Irishman said that he was [illegible] in bed with the grip for three [illegible] and was then sick for four [illegible] after he got well. That was a [illegible] Irishman. The [illegible] of [illegible] city have had the grip this winter [illegible] [illegible] and [illegible] of the [illegible] [illegible] leave no disease so [illegible] and so common [illegible] the system in so precarious and dangerous a condition. All that [illegible] feeling, dull headache, [illegible] nervousness, that "cough that [illegible] that "cold in the head" that [illegible] and that "lack of ambition" [illegible] all be done away with by [illegible] well-directed treatment. [illegible] neglect yours. Delays are [illegible]

BOULDER BASEBALL DATES OUT

Colorado Will Meet All State Rivals; Closes Season With Tigers at Home.

Manager Morrow of the University of Colorado baseball team, while in Colorado Springs yesterday, announced the Boulder schedule for the remainder of the season. The dates are as follows:

April 18—Denver University at Denver.
April 25—Aggies at Boulder.
May 2—Mines at Boulder.
May 9—Aggies at Fort Collins.
May 15—Denver at Boulder.
May 20—Mines at Golden.
May 23—Colorado College at Boulder.

SPORTING NOTES

Now someone asks: Did you ever see a pole vault or a discus hurl, or a shot put, or a mile run, or a hammer throw or a hurdle race?

Another rumpus has been started at Pennsylvania because some of the athletes are delinquent in their board at the training table. "Big Bill" Hollenback, football captain, owes for the slight period of something like three years.

A California bowler kept on the job 24 hours straight. He knocked over 19,700 pins in his endurance contest, lacking only 4,000 of the world's record.

The Pacific Athletic association, after investigation, reports that it has been unable to discover that Ralph Rose, champion shot putter, is a professional as charged.

Manager Frank Chance of the Cubs has been measured for a special kind of shoe, in which he will play the coming season. The shoe is to be provided with a row of nails around the outer edge of the sole, so as to throw his weight more heavily on the opposite side of the foot.

TWO NEW PASTORS COMING

The Revs. Johnston and Ruggles Accept Calls to Colorado Springs Churches.

Two new pastors for Colorado Springs churches will soon arrive in the city. This morning at the First Presbyterian church it will be announced to the congregation that the Rev. Dr. Howard Agnew Johnston of Ohio has accepted the call tendered him some time ago to take charge of the church.

Dr. Johnston has held pastorates in Cincinnati, Des Moines, Chicago and New York. He was also selected two years ago by the Presbyterian assembly to visit missions in Asia. He is the author of a number of well-known religious works. The exact date of his arrival in the city has not been announced.

The new pastor of the First Universalist church in this city is the Rev. R. C. Ruggles, former pastor of the Tuttle Memorial church at Minneapolis. He will preach his first sermon in the city the evening of Easter Sunday, April 8. His pastorate will be divided between the Universalist church here and one in Denver.

Good Cough Medicine for Children and Grown Folks, Too.

"We could hardly do without Chamberlain's Cough Remedy," says Mrs. Flora Despain of Lloyd, Ky. "I found it to be so good for the croup, and have used it for years. I can heartily recommend it for coughs, colds and croup in children and grown folks, too." The above shows the implicit confidence that many mothers place in Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, a confidence based on many years' experience in the use of it. No one need hesitate to use this remedy, for it contains no chloroform, opium or other narcotics, and may be given to a child as confidently as to an adult. For sale by all druggists.

PARTY FOR MISS JACOBS.

Many Friends Surprise Principal of Cheyenne School.

Miss Anna Jacobs, principal of the Cheyenne school, was given a surprise party Friday evening by the patrons of the school. Among those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Clark, Mr. and Mrs. Horsfall, Mr. and Mrs. T. C. Meyer, Mr. and Mrs. Moffatt, Mr. and Mrs. Hurlan, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Cotton, Mrs. Matthew, Mrs. Botting, Mrs. J. W. Yates, Miss Dora Foster, Miss Lee Botting, J. H. Bruening, Geo. F. Holmes, Mrs. Hoag, Mrs. Ella Jeannie, Mrs. Evans, Mrs. Day, Miss Day, Miss Hurst, Miss Dolly Botting, Miss Morrow, Miss Matthew, Miss Evans, Misses Mabel and Nellie Hurlan, Miss Anna Jacobs and several others.

During the evening Mr. Horsfall presented Miss Jacobs with a beautiful mahogany oak writing desk from her many friends on Cheyenne Road and in Broadmoor.

It had been rumored that Miss Jacobs had decided to sever her connection with the Cheyenne school at the expiration of the term and the patrons of the school took occasion to ask her to reconsider and stay another year.

A New Preparation.

Chamberlain's Liniment is a new preparation and a good one. It is especially valuable as a cure for chronic and muscular rheumatism, and for the relief from pain which it affords in acute inflammatory rheumatism. Those who have used it have invariably spoken of it in the highest terms of praise. Sore back, lame shoulder and stiff joints are due to rheumatism of the muscles usually brought on by exposure to cold or damp, and are quickly cured by rubbing this liniment freely in and massaging the affected parts. Soreness of the muscles, whether induced by violent exercise or injury, is relieved by this liniment. For sale by all druggists.

CARD OF THANKS.

We desire to express our sincere thanks to our many friends for their sympathy and kindness during the sickness and death of our beloved mother and grandmother and for the many beautiful floral tributes.

TO EXHIBIT NEW PLOW.

Hammers Will Take Implement to La Junta This Week.

G. W. Hammers will ship his plow to La Junta this week, where, on Thursday, he will give an exhibition. The tests will be on the Reynolds ranch, where the soil is of a hard adobe and will put the new implement to a hard test. The exhibition will be witnessed by several local and Arkansas Valley capitalists, farmers and factory men who are interested in the project of building a factory for the manufacture of the new implement.

NEW LAWS FOR NEW CRIMES.

From Harper's Weekly.

If Draco and Solon, the old-time lawmakers, should revisit the earth, a tour of investigation in these United States certainly might all the time with the would make it speedily clear to them that we moderns, as well as the ancients, busy framing of new laws.

"From fines for failure to provide good drinking water on passenger trains" a Rhode Islander might easy to which a fellow railroader in South Carolina would add:

"For this state a jail sentence follows a failure to provide spittoons for every two seats in our cars."

"A man in Virginia named [illegible] killed a partridge on the second day of February, for which I must serve time in jail."

"In Tennessee a man must pay a fine or serve time for using [illegible] for killing fish with dynamite."

"In Wisconsin a baker must empty three weeks in [illegible] his bakery."

"In California laborers are punished by fine or imprisonment should they fail in the proper [illegible] to notify [illegible] physician of certain grades of illness in their patients."

"To water a bicycle path in the streets of Ohio is an offense punishable by heavy fine and sometimes imprisonment."

"In most of the states it is a penal offense [illegible] a coloring wife or to sell kerosene that is not up to the fire test."

If the old lawgivers were to extend their tour of investigation they might learn of men fined or imprisoned for dropping advertising matter in letter chutes; for gambling by means of slot machines; and for countless other offenses the very means for committing which were unknown one hundred years ago.

SUNDAY, APRIL 12, 1908.

SIDEWALK BUILDING.

ALONG with the early birds, the budding leaves and other signs of spring come the sidewalk builders. They are in evidence on Tejon Street now, putting in cross walks where cross walks are most needed. The crossings at the corner of Tejon and Platte Avenue were finished last fall, just before the advent of cold weather, and now the street department has resumed work where it left off and, we suppose, will continue it north as far as Cache la Poudre Street. Cross walks are probably needed at the five street intersections between Platte and Cache la Poudre more than at any other particular place, because more people pass that way daily. But they are needed everywhere, and the work should not stop until it is finished.

Now that Colorado Springs has so many good sidewalks it is a wonder how we ever managed to get along without them. Cascade and Nevada avenues and Tejon Street, the principal north-and-south thoroughfares, are provided with substantial walks almost their entire lengths, with the exception of a 50-foot interval here and there that marks the abode of some uncompromising opponent of progress who glories in his or her devotion to the dirty old gravel paths which properly belong to the era of log cabins and tallow dips. Everybody else has joined the procession; the vast majority of those who opposed concrete walks two years ago have come to realize their many advantages, and of the small minority that remains unconverted the most that can be said is that it is annoying but unimportant.

But those few people should be compelled to obey the law just the same. It is unfair to the many who have been put to the expense of building walks to permit an obstructionist here and there to continue defiance of that ordinance. The ordinance was made for all alike, and it is time for the city to put a stop to the trifling of the few who refuse to conform to it. The work should be done immediately and the cost assessed against the property; then if they don't like it they can tell their troubles to the tax-collector.

With the sidewalk building which will undoubtedly be done next summer all of the streets in the central part of Colorado Springs will be thus improved, and only the outlying portions will remain to be attended to in the future. The gap on the west side between the viaduct and the top of the hill is still in a deplorable condition, all the worse because it is used by so many people, but this is due to the delay in raising the grade. There is no good reason, however, why the building of sidewalks in this part of Huerfano Street should be further postponed, for it would be a simple matter to make the necessary fill at the sides of the streets and then lay the walks, leaving the fill at the roadway for such future time as the city may be able to attend to it. At present pedestrians are compelled to walk in the dusty roadway which, besides being very disagreeable, is dangerous, especially at night, when passing vehicles are not so easily avoided as in daytime. Huerfano Street at this point is the principal avenue of communication between Colorado Springs and the west side, Colorado City and Manitou, and it is a grave injustice to the many thousands of people living in that locality to permit the street to remain in its present condition longer than is absolutely necessary.

CASTRO'S DEFIANCE.

JUST how to deal with the obstreperous Castro is one of the knottiest small problems that has engaged the attention of Congress and the State Department for a long time. If, instead of the gang of conscienceless buccaneers who control Venezuela, the offending Power was a responsible government, even though many times stronger, the problem would be much easier of solution—indeed, it probably never would have arisen. Castro is the Peck's bad boy of international politics. He hides behind a fence and calls names and makes faces at the passerby, then he takes to his heels, retreating just far enough to avoid capture, and repeats the performance. Great Britain, Germany, Italy and Spain have had their troubles with him in turn. The United States has had more disagreeable experiences of the sort than any other Power, because, in addition to looking after the grievances of its citizens who have business interests in Venezuela, it is compelled by the Monroe Doctrine to straighten out the numerous tangles into which Castro gets himself with other governments.

The Venezuelan dictator has no sense of honor whatever, either personal or political; his treaty agreements are as worthless as his verbal promises, and he is so dishonest that he can not resist the temptation to grant a public or business concession given to foreigners if thereby he can grab their property and exploit it for his private gain. He lacks every kind of capacity save one, but in that one field he is gigantically successful; he is a shrewd, clever schemer, a master of intrigue, and an adept in the art of setting opposing factions against each other in order to keep them so busy settling their differences that they have no time to fight him. That a man so unscrupulous and so devoid of statesmanlike qualities should be able for years to maintain himself as virtual dictator of a country so large and so rich in natural resources as Venezuela simply shows to what a low ebb the political fortunes of that country have sunk.

CONTEMPT INSTEAD OF GRATITUDE

Instead of showing itself the persistent enemy of the United States in every matter affecting the relations between the two countries, Venezuela ought to be supremely grateful to this country, for if it had not been for the timely intervention of our Government on several notable occasions its national identity would long since have been lost and its territory would have been swallowed up in the onward march of the British Empire. No nation could long adhere to the peculiar Venezuelan principles of diplomacy without having to defend them by force of arms unless it had a strong protector to hold its indignant opponents at bay, and the United States has enacted the role of protector from the beginning—not through any love for Venezuela, but because it is a part of the Monroe Doctrine, to which we are committed. If Great Britain or any of the other offended nations had ever been permitted to make war to redress their grievances it is certain that the Venezuelan government would speedily have been overthrown and—again waiving the Monroe Doctrine—its territory annexed by the conquering Power.

But in spite of all the United States has done for it, Venezuela continues its contemptuous treatment. Even in diplomatic correspondence where no questions of moment are concerned, Castro and his ministers assume a top-lofty air of cool impudence which no other government would think of adopting, any more than a well-bred man would think of using it in his personal or business correspondence. The American minister at Caracas is snubbed and insulted with impunity, and when affairs reach such a critical stage that a demonstration by American warships is threatened Castro coolly announces that he has no fear of the issue, because warships can't sail overland to his capital. He recently characterized possible war between the United States and Venezuela as a contest between a fish and a cat, in which the cat would emerge victorious because it would have the good sense to remain on the farm where the fish could not follow it.

WHAT MIGHT HAPPEN.

But Castro may be mistaken for once. In the event of armed reprisals our Government would not be so foolish as to attempt an invasion of the country. The road from La Guaira, the principal seaport, to Caracas, the capital, leads through a mountainous country, every foot of which could be easily defended by a small force, but it would be a simple matter for a few warships to land a force of marines in each seaport, taking possession of the customs houses and holding them until the full indemnity was collected. Meanwhile one of the never-ending succession of revolutions would probably break out to keep the Dictator busy defending his capital, for General Matos and other aspirants to the Presidency are fairly itching for such a chance to dispute Castro's claim as would be afforded by this action by the American Government. Indications that Castro's day of reckoning is near at hand are more promising now than at any time in recent years.

LET THEM SEE IT.

From the Portland (Me.) Press.

China's invitation is accepted. Who next? Don't speak all at once. If the nations of southern Asia and the Mediterranean want the fleet to play with they should speak up.

NO ONE WILL BE LONESOME.

From the Louisville Courier-Journal.

In a little while, if Pennsylvania continues to have good luck, a large chorus in the penitentiary will be singing, "Hail, hail, the gang's all here."

CAN'T BEAT THESE TRUSTS.

From the Philadelphia Inquirer.

The price of ice is to be put up because, say the producers, the winter was so warm. And the price of coal went up for the same reason. In both cases the trust people seem to need the money.

ONE WAY OUT.

From the Nashville American.

The Republicans might nominate Roosevelt and Bryan while the Democrats made their ticket read Bryan and Roosevelt—platforms identical; question for debate: "Who saw it first?"

THE NAME OF THE ARMY.

From the San Francisco Chronicle.

Army and Navy Life publishes a communication from W. W. Stickley in which he says: "I thought some of your readers might like to know that 'United States Army' is incorrect. The solecism is not noticed because there is no adjectival form for the word 'states.' The only thing that can be done is to use the apostrophe, or apostrophe and s, and write it 'United States' Army or 'United State's Army.' We never say the England army, the France army, the Germany army, etc." Mr. Stickley is mistaken when he says that the only thing that can be done is to use the apostrophe or apostrophe and s, for the ungrammatical form is being used constantly in common speech and in documents, and there is nothing in the way of calling it the American Army except a false modesty which makes the people of this country shrink from appropriating a name which is conferred upon it by the rest of the world, which persists in recognizing the United States as "America."

THE CURSE OF AMERICA.

From the San Francisco Chronicle.

The curse of America is its lack of discipline. In the family, the school and the college youngsters grow up to do as they please. There is a mawkish sentiment which is evidence of degeneracy and which prevents the old-fashioned, wholesome enforcement of authority among children and youth. It is not good for society and not good for the individuals. In every family and in every school it is desirable to have some stringent regulations, if for no other reason than keeping them supplied with. The best foundation for character is the habit of submission to authority, and the time to acquire that habit is in childhood and youth. None can ever become so competent to wisely direct as those who have first learned to obey. The looseness and instability in American character has its beginning in the looseness and instability of family discipline and in the insistence of silly and inefficient parents that the same looseness of discipline shall be carried into the schools, from which it easily extends into the colleges. The fledgeling in college will turn out a much more useful member of society if he is made to behave himself or clear out.

STRAIGHT TALK.

To the Editor of The Gazette:

The comments in your Open Parliament of the 11th instant upon W. J. Bryan's lecture, "The Prince of Peace," present an unfavorable view, which, I venture to affirm, is not held by 1 per cent of those present last Sunday evening. The present writer has no disposition, any more than had the orator on that occasion, to force his views on the faith and practice of religion upon the conscience of any man, but some word should be said in rebuke of some of the flippant statements made by the writer who signs himself with the first letter of the word partridge.

In the first place, it makes no difference as to whether Mr. Bryan ever ran for President or ever will again, nor as to his liability to sit in the presidential chair. He was invited to and did express his views on the religion of Jesus Christ—which are practically the same as President Roosevelt's—in a dignified and manly way. President Lincoln, 50 years ago, also held practically the same views of reverence for the Christian religion, and though not a member of any church, was no less a believer. A comparison of the speeches of Lincoln and Bryan is invited, and both of them have now been called clowns. My impression was that the dignified pronouncement upon so important a subject as the vital theme affecting the present and future life, by a man of Mr. Bryan's prominence, must have a good influence especially upon young men.

Mr. Bryan stated clearly why he believed in the Y. M. C. A., and he met responsive spirits in a city that supports at least three such associations. Yet Mr. Bryan did not so much as invite any man to join one of these associations, nor one of the many churches. Indeed, Mr. Bryan does not aspire to dictate what shall be the religious or political belief of any man: "You pay your money and you take your choice." If Mr. Bryan chooses to believe in the Bible, with its miracles and its profound moral laws and truths which Moses and the prophets promulgated thousands of years ago, and in the "Great Prince of Peace" who came in the fullness of time to save men from their sins, he is only one of many, very many, who hold to the same beliefs. Mr. Bryan could not explain, as he stated, many things in the Bible, but on the other hand, our puny science, which has changed with every age, can not explain them away. The Bible does not purport to be a treatise on science or invention, but don't be too sure that its truths are not on a more solid and lasting basis than our so-called science of today. To the true believer in the Bible, the facts of science are welcomed as giving new force and value to the teachings of true religion and help to dispel superstition and error from the world.

And so may we all be "liberal-minded, progressive and worthy" to be called true disciples of the "Prince of Peace."

G. W. FIELD, M. D.

Colorado Springs, April 1.

THE MAN AND HIS JOB

By Herbert J. Hapgood

An original idea backed up by the ability to execute, is worth more to a man than any other earthly asset. If a man has the insight to recognize the best way of doing a thing and the push and progressiveness to see that this is done, he has a seat reserved for him in the row with those who have lived successful lives.

Watch every detail in the system under which your business is run, and see if you cannot devise a more economical method.

Three years ago, a young man came from Louisville, Ky. He didn't travel in a Pullman car, nor even in an ordinary day coach. He earned his transportation, rather, by the honorable, though somewhat disagreeable, task of feeding live stock on a cattle train.

When he reached New York, he got a job as a bill poster. Most men would have stayed at that job and worked the rest of their lives in overalls with paste-pot and brush. But this man possessed insight and he conceived an original idea.

At that time it was the custom of each individual advertising company to send out special inspectors to see if their bills were properly posted, and that all their billboards were covered. Now, this man worked out a plan to have all this inspection done by messenger boys. He had no trouble in interesting one of the big telegraph companies who agreed to pay him a commission on all the business he got.

He left his overalls and paste-pot and began to build up a business.

Today he finds himself the possessor of a small fortune. But more than that, he has instituted a system which has proved to be a money-saving and a labor-saving device.

Today's Horoscope

Sunday, April 12, 1908.

Take heed this day to let no quarrels rise. Ill look on them the watchers of the skies.

A placid calm, nonthreatening day save for disputes. On these there is a gloom, a spell, waiting that tempers will flare forth suddenly and lead to rash words and worse deeds. Avoid all subjects of debate.

The influences of the configuration are such as work best for serene contemplation. Reflect rather than act, behold rather than participate, dream rather than do. Let the heart expand with the visions of the wondering eye in this period.

From sky and sun there will come better counsel this day than from man.

The woman with this birth-date will experience some annoyance in her family or close social circle during the twelvemonth, but it will be counter-balanced by a great success in a new undertaking.

The man whose birth-date falls today will meet with favorable results to his enterprises, but he must beware of a quarrel with a colleague or an employer.

The girl born today will be inclined to carelessness in dress. She will be set on professional success.

The boy born today will be quick in temper and unless his disposition to change on slight pretexts be curbed, he will be unsuccessful in business.

DICTIONARY STUDY IN KANSAS.

From the Wellsville (Kan.) Globe.

It is incorrect to speak of "shucking" corn; that the word shuck is a noun and that when one wishes to use a verb referring to stripping the shuck from an ear of corn he should use husk.—Prairie Center (Kan.) World.

However, late dictionaries allow the use of both shuck and husk as verbs, as well as their use as nouns. So if you want to say that a man shucked 150 bushels of corn in ten hours you may do so, or you may say that he husked 150 bushels of corn. The only possible way in which you may be called down is to have some one say you are a liar.

Optimism Is Sanity

WORLDLY learning must be saturated with moral sentiment before it becomes serviceable to the higher life, and worldly knowledge must have a culminating sense of the unpurchasable before it understands that the treasures of happiness are as rich in business depression as in prosperity. One of our finest women essayists has just written:

It comes to us with a misgiving that is almost a terror, when we pause to think that we stand here in the midst of mortal life and that we shall not pass this way again. Life is infinitely beautiful, and we, if we fail to find it so, must search for the defect, not around or outside us, but in ourselves. He is happy who finds his perceptions sharpening, his powers increasing, his sympathies widening, his helpfulness broadening.

To exult, be confident and believe in worldly success when times are good is as easy as it is to sorrow, grumble and despair when the hard times come. In either direction the way of looking is so instinctive that it is no more than animal gruntings in content over food and squealings in distress over a late meal. The rule of of intelligence is the reverse to look for defects and shortcomings when times are good and to watch for the useful, charming and compensatory when the tide of wealth runs low. Even the tide of wealth never runs so terribly so low, and the low tide is the time when lessons are learned, defects are remedied and preparations are made for solid accumulations in the better day coming. It is therefore the real time of success for the man who understands how to succeed. It is the time when the sluggard, the incompetent and the debauched are shaken out; when dishonesty and foolishness and bad methods are discarded; when the fittest survive and the greater prosperity is constructed. The obvious easy, animal, childish mode is to stalk haughtily, swollen with vanity and optimistic courage when the sun of business shines, and to skulk and shrink, timid and cowed and cowardly, scattering distrust and pessimism, when a passing cloud casts a shadow. The childish mode makes good times foolish and short of life. The mode of manly sanity, which seeks in success to buttress every weak point and in depression to make the most of the good, shortens the dull period and with cheerfulness and confidence spreads the spirit of faith in work and resources.

After all, even the gross, material difference between flush times and depression is not half as wide as people, in their childishness, make it appear. Every man may have a few more perplexities and there may be a small remnant of actual distress, but the great body of people in America live about as they lived before. Most of them have the same abundance of food, the same clothes, more amusements than they need and more luxuries than are good for the soul. Homes stand where they stood, the thousand conveniences of civilization are absolutely unchanged. Business has gone to smash? Has it? The truth generally is that business has only slowed down a little and is going along so well that its owners would not entertain a thought of exchanging for what would 50 years ago have been rated as the very dizziness of prosperity. To restore the good times of late years does not take much except true courage and intelligent optimism to deal with the exhaustless resources of the country, which are in use.

Pluck wins! It always wins, though days be slow
And nights be dark 'twixt days that come and go;
Still pluck will win; its average is sure.
He gains the prize who will the most endure;
Who faces issues; he who never shirks;
Who waits and watches, and who always works.

And what if times were worse than they are or can it be in America? Wealth is such a triviality compared with life. "The imponderables are greater than the things which are weighed, measured and bought." You can sell life for a triviality of wealth, but you cannot buy it back. For the life which joys in its own gifts it does not solemnly matter whether business times are good or bad. Thought, feeling, good and happiness are a wealth which has no hard times. The pulsing of the healthy blood in healthy arteries is a joy infinitely deeper than any pleasure derived from the acquisition of fame or stocks and bonds or lands and goods. The heart warms with the innocent pleasure of being painlessly alive; alive in a midst of a munificent world of beauty, color, society, mind and movement; boundless, restless, ready at hand and glad to serve you. It is a picture of regimes so sweet and inspiring that one marvels at the fortune he possesses in the indescribable glory of human life. Congenial forces act upon the conscious life of the true man. There is no excuse for running away, for hiding in timidity, for trying to spoil the joy of others in living. The emergence of the mind from the lower senses is signalized by this grand perception of ecstacy over the magnetism of being alive in the midst of life. All the future is before the man who truly lives. His optimism is unshakable because no event, even pain and disease, can rob him of the magic of this supreme gift when once he realizes what is the overflowing richness of its ownership.

Sanity manifests itself in clearness of vision and decision of character. Weakness of mind is indicated by doubt, depression and despair. There is not much of darkness in the actual future; it is nearly always in the mind which is touched with disorder. Clearness of mind does not wax insolent in prosperity or become pusillanimous in adversity. An Englishman has said that the Scotch are a successful breed because they take their pleasures with suspicion and their sorrows with hope. Whether the habit is Scottish or not, it is a good one for all breeds. The best friend of humanity is the sane teacher who warns against intoxication in good times and points out the vast preponderance of strength in dull times. Doubt the boom and hustle confidently in the slowness of trade is an admirable business motto and a reliable guide in every department of life. Optimism is sanity, and sanity is always right.

EVER NOT HIM?

"Fine day," observed the sallow passenger with the eye glasses.

"Huh?"

"I say it's a fine day."

"O, yes," answered the man who was trying to read a newspaper.

"Be a lot of trouble with the fruit, though, when the cold weather comes along next month."

"Huh?"

"I say there'll be a lot of trouble with the fruit when the cold weather—"

"O, yes."

"It's all right, though, I guess. Whatever happens is all right."

"Uh-huh."

"I see old Jake Schaefer beat the young fellow last night."

"Beat him?"

"Yes, playing billiards, you know."

"Uh-huh."

"I don't know anything about billiards myself, but I am told it's a fine game."

"So?"

"Yes. But I'd rather see a good game of baseball. Wouldn't you?"

"Uh-huh."

"Don't you think Taft stands a good chance of getting the nomination next June on the first ballot?"

"Uh-huh."

"Who do you think will be put up for vice president?"

"Uh-huh."

"Think it'll be Hughes?"

"Uh-huh."

"Or maybe it'll be La Follette?"

"Uh-huh."

"Anything new in the paper this morning?"

"Yes. Man killed in an elevated train."

"How?"

"He was talked to death."

The sallow faced passenger with the eye glasses gulped once or twice and breathed hard, but had nothing further to offer.

USES FOR THE GYROSCOPE.

From Success Magazine.

Great is the gyroscope and mysterious are the wonders it performs. Plant one in the midst of a railway train and that vehicle goes balancing about the country on one rail and does the tight-rope act over dizzy chasms. Start one whirling in an ocean vessel and it becomes steady and respectable, the dining-room table no longer kicks the chandelier and seasickness is only a troubled memory. Many an airship of uncertain habits after taking one gyroscope has become a model of propriety and right living.

If this new invention has such a steadying influence, would it not be a pity to confine its use to material things? We know a lot of newspapers that ought to have them buzzing steadily in the editorial sanctum so that they would not be rocked by every financial wind that blows. In New York there is a great orator who has talked on all sides and the top and bottom of every public question. He ought to be fitted up with a gyroscope.

There are a lot of us who should have this modern improvement installed—the statesman forever listening for the public clamor, the legislator bending and swaying with the rustle of the certified check, the wabbly clubman caroling to the breaking dawn. There should be a pocket size for the life insurance directors and bank presidents to keep them steady amid other people's money. When we have everything from the ship of state to the vernal equinox fitted up with gyroscopes, what a safe, sane and conservative universe it will be!

NICHOLAS II.

From the Fortnightly Review.

We are being forced to revise our estimate of the czar. He has played, in spite of all prophecy, a part as different as possible from that of Louis XIV. He has defeated the revolutionary passion which if he had not resisted it would have swept him before it like a straw. He has shown more nerve, more judgment, more persistency than he was credited by any foreign observer with possessing, and even if he has succeeded mainly by accepting final advice, he has saved his dynasty from destruction, his empire from anarchy and his subjects from themselves.

Cut Out Along Dotted Lines

Cut this out and put it in your pocketbook, and then on Monday, NO MATTER HOW BUSY YOU MAY BE, call at No. 107 East Kiowa street—IT WILL PAY YOU—and ask to see the many labor-saving devices that are now on exhibition. Here are a few:

1. A General Electric Motor, complete, to run your sewing machine. Installed for $12.50. Costs less than one cent an hour to run. They're selling fast owing to the low price.

2. An electric washing machine, $42.50 complete (on time payments, too), that will do a whole month's family washing for TEN cents. Sounds unbelievable, but it's a fact.

3. Electric toasters that toast bread right on the breakfast table.

4. The best general electric iron, complete, $4.00.

5. THE BEST DOUBLE SHEET STEEL GAS RANGE MADE, WITH FIVE BURNERS, SEPARATE OVEN AND BROILER, FOR SIXTEEN DOLLARS. We pipe FREE to your house, too. Gas as a fuel is FAR CHEAPER than coal, with all work and dirt eliminated.

6. Splendid two-hole gas plates, full nickeled, for $2.

7. Gas toasters for 25c.

8. INSTANTANEOUS gas water-heaters that will fill a tub with all the water you need before you are ready for your bath.

All we ask you to do is call and see for yourself. You'll not be asked to buy. A penny's worth of look is worth a dollar's worth of telling. You're always welcome here. If you can't come yourself, we'll bring our goods to you if you'll just PHONE OUR GIRL, MAIN 290. The Gas Co., No. 107 East Kiowa.

Eat Properly and Live Long

Open Secrets of Life and Beauty—Decrepitude Does Not Depend on Years—The Society Matron No Longer Needs Cosmetics—How to Reach One Hundred Hale and Hearty.

By Dr. G. Henry Brinkler, Author of "Suitable Foods."

NEARLY all of us are acquainted with people of three score years and ten who appear as youthful as others of half that age. Some attribute their youthfulness to temperance, while others are just as positive in other and opposite directions. Statistics do not enlighten us. The teachings of medical men and health advisers are not consistent. So we may reasonably presume that people maintain their youthfulness by chance, as they live by chance. And we may not wonder at the apathy on the subject of long life, because the richest and the wisest of us have hitherto always shown signs of decay and death.

All must admit that the one indispensable factor in life is nourishment through mouth and nostrils. People can live without sunshine, exercise, and everything else but foods and air. It is, therefore, pertinent to inquire why sufficient foods have not maintained life indefinitely, in thorough working condition. At the outset we are filled with the greatest variety of foods and habits. As children, few of us were fed alike. Certainly no two adults take the same kinds and proportions of foods and drinks, and when diseased, they follow the orthodox advice to make a change of diet. And the idea that a constant change of diet is beneficial, is most prevalent—so that it is impossible to trace the causes which keep people youthful or have kept alive our centenarians.

Examining, then, the bodies of the old and the young, we find that old, decrepit bodies are coarser, tougher, denser, stiffer, the tissues are hardened or ossified, the arteries are incrusted or thickened from fibrous, gelatinous and calcareous earthy deposits. From the child's earliest periods of existence, when it is almost a fluid, tender, pliable, elastic and energetic through infancy, childhood, youth, manhood, decrepitude to death, its body passes through so many stages of consolidation or ossification. The solids of the body are built from materials supplied in the blood which, in turn, come through the chyle and chyme from foods. Now, foods supply earthy matter in very different proportions, and all animals need a certain quality to nourish the solid parts of their bodies, just as hens need enough lime in their foods or their eggs will not have hard shells. But it is as possible to take too much as to take too little.

By earthy materials I mean only the coarser elements, because, in a sense, all terrestrial creation is earthy, as the elements are organized through plant life into animal life and into bird life. The coarsest elements are minerals, salt, soda, etc., and in the order of enumeration, cereals, pulses, while nuts, animal foods, fruit, green vegetables, have less and less earthy matter, as the elements are organized into higher and more active life. The keynote of creation is evolution; get away from crawling earth into active life.

Common salt contains a fearfully large amount of calcareous matter. The supposed necessity for its use is to account for the different phenomena of organization and life, regardless of the finer forms of salt in organic life. Whole tribes of powerful, active persons subsist without salt, and no need is experienced when flesh foods or other salty foods are eaten liberally.

Bread, owing to its staying power, is called the staff of life, but with reference to the amount of earthy matter, it might justly be termed the quagmire of death.

Spring water contains an amount of earthy ingredients fearful to contemplate, when we can calculate that a person drinking an average amount would within forty years, take enough for a pillar of salt the size of himself, which alone would clog every artery long before the age of 20 if the kidneys did not throw off the major part. The common haphazard diet is unable to throw it out completely and so a part always remains unabsorbed to be distributed and accumulated in some parts of the body to induce disease, discomfort, decrepitude and death. No process short of distillation removes the calcareous matter held in solution, but even distilled water is insipid, lifeless and far inferior to nature's finest liquids stored in fruits and green vegetables.

As age advances, or rather, as consolidation increases, the composition of the teeth gradually changes, the amount of earthy matter increasing and the gelatine or animal glue diminishing to such an extent that the teeth, even in young persons, crumble away like a piece of chalk. People so afflicted are great eaters of bread, puddings, pies, etc. By an opposite course of feeding, the gelatine is supplied, decay arrested and the teeth fixed firmly in the gums.

The periods of puberty and maturity are merely degrees of arterial ossification. The various stages of life are reached early or late, according to the amount of solid, calcareous matter in the food. When these habits of eating are continued uniformly through life it would be easy to calculate the date of natural death from the rate of ossification. Wherever old-looking children are found, in factories or elsewhere, the quantity of solid grain food eaten is comparatively large.

Childhood and youthfulness passed, the skin loses its pliable, velvety nature and takes on an incrusted surface, and if the skin be rubbed with a dry, hard brush or scratched with a finger nail, the incrustation will [illegible] off. This flour-like substance consists of gelatine with earthy or bony matter. Aged persons of 60 or 80 show incrustations clearly, and all who have eaten much calcareous foods for a great number of years. The writer has repeatedly produced and removed dandruff on the principle herein outlined. Women eat less, labor and perspire less than men, but even they succumb to the incrustations.

As the earthy matter which encrusts a common tea kettle is deposited by the water, which is condensed by evaporation, so in the animal body it is deposited when the fluids pass off into vapor or gas. The whole system becomes choked, the body no longer can be efficiently nourished and begins to wither.

Look around; see for yourself that thin, bony persons with rough skin are always attached to solid, earthy foods. Also heavy persons, whose movements—when they do move—are clumsy, consume great quantities of bread and pastries, while those who live more on meats, fruits and vegetables are distinguished for health and activity.

Herodotus, in the twenty-second chapter of his third book, describes an interview with Ethiopians called Macrobii, because most of them lived 120 years and over. They attributed their longevity to boiled flesh and milk, and they believed other people were short-lived because they ate dirt, by which they meant bread. They were described as noticeable for "beauty and the large proportions of their bodies."

Swans, rooks, crows, hawks, eagles, parrots in their natural state and other birds of like nature, live many hundreds of years, and their foods are flesh, worms, snails, caterpillars, fish, grass, seeds, and grains. Horses, cows, pigs, dogs in domestic state, live on more earthy foods, and there is a corresponding difference in the periods of their existence.

The poorer classes of mankind have double the mortality rate of the rich, and this seems largely due to the greater proportion of bread consumed. For, as the scale of income is higher, a man purchases more meat and other gratifications, thereby diminishing the use of breadstuffs.

It is a mistake to compare the human body to a machine in every particular. It is customary to say that the body becomes old and dies because it is worn out. But a man who does naught but eat, drink and sleep is as liable to die as a hard-working man, perhaps more so. It cannot be well said that the human body wears out like a machine, because our hardest workers are frequently the ones who live longest. The truth is that the human machine is self-repairing, and its troubles, whether disease, decrepitude or natural death, arise naturally from a clogging which prevents the self-repairing nutriment. A machine which is clogged will quickly cease working. A man who dies gradually while sitting about doing nothing, is certainly not worn out, but clogged with calcareous matter which has encrusted the arteries. As the inner lining of the arteries becomes more encrusted, it permits a smaller and smaller quantity of blood to reach the tissues.

If the earthy matter were taken into the system as needed to nourish the bones, and at the times needed, the various organs could not ossify from any excess, the capillaries could not become obliterated, the brain could not grow smaller and more foolish by years, sight could not fail, hearing, taste and smell could not lose their susceptibilities, hair could not turn gray, the skin could not become dried up and wrinkled, because the body could be adequately nourished and retain the elasticity and fluidity of youth. If this is but partially accomplished, life is prolonged. If this is completely accomplished and every element supplied to the body in needed proportion, then must life be prolonged indefinitely.

Lucien Daniel, of the Academie Francaise, has doubled the life of many plants by grafting them on to more virile plants. The tobacco plant normally lives one year, but grafted on to the tomato plant lives at least two years from this change of nutrition.

One giant sequoia of California, according to experts, has lived 5,000 years, and is now showing signs of decay. While man is striving to add to the thousands of years of this hoary ancient, he is neglecting to extend his own meager decades. The tree, rooted in one spot, has possibly exhausted the elements it needed from that soil. But not so with man, who has every food at his command at all times. No, there are resources in man, the prize product of nature, that have been sung by poets, but never fully realized or utilized.

The practical man must remember that even though overwork, worry, friendly dissipations, poverty of supplies, may ruin his vitality, the possibility of prolonging life does not disappear as long as he can sometimes or some day command time for sufficient rest and recuperation, the foods which restore depleted vigor.

Rejuvenating foods are suitable juicy fruits, as berries, apples, soft pears, green grapes, green figs, when suitably combined with tender lean meats, game, fowl fish, milk, cheese, buttermilk, suitable green vegetables, the whites of eggs. The last-named food is the elixir of life to all aged, toothless, haggard, worried individuals, provided it is not used haphazardly, for wrongly used it will clog.

Foods which destroy health and beauty, promote dullness and languor, and lead to premature old age and death, are: Alcohol (including mineral waters and all temperance drinks), plain water, cocoa (including chocolate), coffee, tea, tobacco, cream, eggs, butter (including fat and oil), table salt (including that in salted meats, fish and vegetables), vinegar, spices, condiments; also, when taken in wrong proportions, fatty, starchy and sweet foods. Thus we eat to die as well as to live.

The thousands who wish to be beautiful are often wrongly counseled to put their trust in outward applications, as if beauty could be rubbed in. All-pervading cleanliness is necessary, and of more importance than the bath is fresh air day and night, and rejuvenating foods, because lasting youthful beauty emanates from within.

The picture of an ambitious, useful career cut short is nature's greatest tragedy. With a full understanding of food selections and proportions, what a long life of useful inventions might come from an Edison, what music from a Wagner! Welcome the day of the open and unwrinkled brow of age, with no grey deformity, but perfect physique and contentment.

NEW JERSEY SNAKE CONVENTION

Montville (N. J.) Dispatch to the New York World.

Other residents of this thriving village will have to go some if they wish to beat the snake story told by John Fitch and Hugh Allen when they got back from Boonton today. Fitch and Allen are farmers with records for truthfulness as well as thirst, so the element of Jersey lightning does not enter into the yarn.

"Just as we turned the bend into Hook Mountain lane," said Fitch, "the horse took fright at a hissing sound, and for about seven seconds stood right up on his tail. We looked down the road a piece, and, sure enough, there was a snake convention in session. Must have been 500 of 'em, all sizes and shapes, with a fat-headed old fellow presiding. The way they were handing out the hiss it must have been an important meeting.

"We backed the horse into a lot and watched the proceedings. The snakes kept rising up in turn until each one had its say. There was one prolonged hiss like the exhaust of an ocean liner, and then the snakes formed into hoops and rolled away into the woods."

A LONDON REVIVAL

A revival meeting was in progress and Sister Jones was called upon for testimony. Being meek and humble she said: "I do not feel as though I should stand here and give testimony. I have been a transgressor for a good many years and have only recently seen the light. I believe that my place is in a dark corner behind the door."

Brother Smith was next called upon for his testimony, and, following the example set by Sister Jones, said: "I, too, have been a sinner for more than 40 years, and I do not think it would be fitting for me to stand before this assembly as a model. I think my place is behind the door, in a dark corner with Sister Jones." And he wondered why the meeting was convulsed with laughter.—London Opinion.

LID DOWN TIGHT IN LONDON.

There Are No Sunday Amusements of Any Kind in British Capital.

From the New York Herald.

The recent agitation in New York over the stoppage of the so-called Sunday concerts has aroused London music hall managers and artists to a realization of the fact that the lid is not only down in London, but ... as well. I doubt if that fact had occurred to them until the rumpus started in New York.

There are no Sunday amusements of any kind in London, and, so far as my observance goes, there is no demand for any. Except for a few hours all bars are open Sunday, so that the noble Briton can get as drunk as a dozen lords if he has the inclination and the price, with none to say him nay. This opportunity is not neglected, it is only fair to add, and also that it is too much abused.

Mr. Alfred Butt, manager of the Palace theater, which is the leading music hall in London and probably of the whole world as well, does not agree with me that there is no demand here for Sunday amusements.

"That there is a great demand for Sunday amusements," said he, "is proved by the enormous attendance at the concert halls every Sunday night, where only sacred music is given. Imagine what the attendance would be if entertainments of a lighter and more popular order were given. However, that is something we need not worry about, because it will never happen."

"Why not?" I asked. "Are Londoners so set in their ways that it is impossible to make any change in the existing order of things?"

"No, that's not exactly the reason, although innovations are not welcomed. The two real reasons which prohibit Sunday entertainments are the Nonconformist conscience, which is very powerful, and the universal, sensible idea that everyone is entitled to one's day rest each week. To have Sunday amusements would mean the passing of new laws, and any party that had the hardihood to do that would be doomed at the next election.

NORDICA REALLY WALTZED IT.

Imagine "Airy, Fairy Lillian" Whirling to the Strains of "The Merry Widow."

From the New York Times.

The hundreds who remained until after the supper at Mme. Nordica's musicale, which took place at Sherry's Sunday night, were treated to an informal feature not on the programme. This was a rendition of "Merry Widow" waltz by Mme. Nordica and Wassily Safonoff, the conductor. While the diva and the musician trod the measure, the other dancers withdrew from the floor and watched the pair with enthusiasm.

As Mme. Nordica's guests were trooping from the supper back to the ballroom, Nahan Franko, who was leading thirty musicians, tapped his baton. The languorous strains of the famous waltz inspired the guests and they hastened to the dance. Mme. Nordica entered the room with General Horace Porter and Mark Twain on either side. Mr. Safonoff approached her with a gallant Russian bow.

"Ah, Madame, you must dance the 'Merry Widow' waltz with me."

"I never dance," replied Mme. Nordica. "I can't, really."

The refusal was only temporary, and after another second the singer came forward with Mr. Safonoff.

"I can't resist this," she called to Mark Twain, and began the waltz. Very humorously Mr. Safonoff burlesqued the Maslovian Prince in the opera. The singer fell into the spirit of the caricature. The guests formed a circle about the dancing space and applauded. Mme. Nordica danced around twice, and then retired.

DO GIRLS ALL LOOK ALIKE?

One Woman Says Hats and Suits Make Them So Appear.

From the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

"The girls nowadays look like ... quart of beans," said a bright woman at luncheon the other day.

"Not because they are little and round, or anything of that sort, but because they all look alike. You can't tell them apart anymore than you can tell one bean from another. They seem to be trying to be just as unoriginal as possible and to suppress whatever individuality they may have.

"One might suppose that they had all been turned out of one mold, with their big pompadours and huge drooping hats, with about the same amount of feather duster for trimmings."

No one can deny that there is more or less truth in the accusation. It is no doubt the mistaken notion which so many girls entertain of the importance of being in style which is responsible for such a state of affairs. The girl who thinks for herself must surely admit that an expression of individuality is much more desirable and even much more effective than a slavish regard for style.

If the girls who so rigidly follow the fashion knew how tiresome this small army of pompadours and seattle hats can become it would seem that a small contingency at least might be willing to depart from the well-trodden path and attempt something a little different. In this matter of hats, for instance, it is a fact which does not need to be fortified by argument that most of them either roll up in the front or the side and down in the back, or droop uncompromisingly all around.

Imagine, then, the surprise and delight of the happy observer who saw just the other day a trim young woman walking along the avenue wearing a broad-brimmed hat that tilted neither up nor down, that swerved neither to the right nor to the left, that was neither longer in the front than the back, and that was worn on the top and not on the back of the head.

Was it in style? The fact is that nobody felt the need of rushing to the fashion expert to ask. It looked well on that girl, exceedingly well, and that was all that anyone cared to know. The tired eyes of the populace must have rested pleasurably on that refreshing sight, and the strange part of it was that the girl [illegible] about her jacket.

This isn't a plea for the straight brimmed hat. It isn't a plea for a hat or a coat of any particular style or shape except the one that looks well on the wearer and best expresses her individuality.

The bill for the registration and regulation of motor vehicles which is before the New York legislature conforms to the uniform measure advocated by the American Automobile association, which also has been introduced in the legislatures of Ohio and Massachusetts.

The Crystal Gazing Fad

Look Into a Polished Crystal and You May See a "Spook."—The Largest Magic Mirror of the Unknown World Is in the Boston Museum of Fine Arts.—Investigations by Professor J. H. Hyslop Into the Revelations of the Crystal Seers.—About One Person in Seven Has the Power.

BOSTON, April 8.—One of the most famous objects in the collections of the Museum of Fine Arts of this city is a great crystal ball with oriental settings, the largest mirror of the subconscious world, it is said, on the planet. Acquired for the Ames collection from an East Indian source and loaned for an indefinite period to the Museum in Copley Square, it perpetually invites to the exercise of the now fashionable fad of crystal gazing. You look into it, or into any other of a large group of similar but smaller globes under certain favoring conditions and, if your temperament is right, you may see visions projected from out your subliminal life.

Seeing things is very popular just now. A play, for example, in which so well known a thespian as Miss Ethel Barrymore is starring this season presents a crystal gazing scene. This is a time, too, when along with the general revival of interest in all topics pertaining to psychical research, more people, probably, than ever before in the history of the world are looking into crystals, glasses of water, polished stone or wood or other surfaces capable of reflecting light with the expectation that apparitions or hallucinations may float before their eyes.

"Spooks" seen in a glass seem from all accounts to be among the easiest to conjure up. Whatever the cause of these apparitions the fact remains that from very early times peculiarly constituted persons—about one individual in seven—have appeared to possess the power of producing hallucinations of a certain kind in themselves by gazing intently into a crystal. In recent years, and especially since the formation of societies for scientific study of psychical research in this country and abroad, interest in such phenomena has been very keen, and a considerable body of facts, apparently well authenticated, has been collected. Prof. James H. Hyslop, president of the new American Society of Psychical Research, has long been studying the psychological considerations involved in this cult of crystal gazing and in his book "Enigmas of Psychical Research," as well as in other popular expositions of metapsychical subjects, has given in detail the records of strange sights from the unseen realm. He cautiously claims nothing from which an argument can be drawn as to such communications from the eternal depths as Sir Oliver Lodge asserts he has had. He finds, however, a great mass of data that fascinate the student of the little understood activities of the subliminal mind.

The marvels of crystal gazing come right down to homely experience. If, for instance, you looked into a glass ball and there came before your eyes a sharp, distinct picture of your old minister whom you had not seen for fifteen years and then just as you exclaimed "Why, Mr. X," the face vanished and there appeared a slight picture of a cemetery, would you not think there was occasion for apprehension? Later the woman who saw this sight in the glass brightly is reported to have gone to the city to which the clergyman had moved, found the man himself dying and recognized the very cemetery which she had seen while looking into the crystal.

This notion of seeing the unseeable at times when the gaze is fixed upon a reflecting surface whose high lights are eliminated as far as possible is nothing new in history. As Prof. Hyslop discloses in his book on the metapsychical enigmas, this form of divination was known among the Greeks, who possessed polished and enchanted crystals in which future events were signified. He has also found traces of the practices of crystal gazing in Assyria, Greece, Rome, China, Japan, India and possibly in some of the South Sea islands. The use of a mirror or crystal ball has been noted among the Apaches of the western plains; they employ a crystal to discover stolen property. Other tribes of Indians make their patients gaze into water in which they see pictures of the food and medicine good for them. In Polynesia a hole is dug in the ground, and as it fills with water the priest peers in to discover the authors of thefts. In India castor oil is held in the hand of a child and in the mirror thus formed float weird pictures of spirits and demons.

Belief in Seeing Sights of the Other World in a Glass Ball Has Led to the Polishing of Enormous Crystals in the Orient—The Biggest One Known to Exist is at the Boston Museum of Fine Arts.

Most of the stories of wonders accomplished by means of crystal gazing have come down on the basis of such testimony that they are regarded by the scientists as interesting but unreliable. Nor are the modern manifestations held to belong necessarily to the realm of the queer. The point of view of modern psychical research is that strange things actually do come before the mind at times, as a result of concentrated gazing. There is no need of calling them supernatural; they are simply supernormal.

Oftentimes an impression made by some circumstance of years before and entirely erased from conscious memory reappears. An advertisement in a newspaper, seen but not really noticed months before, will drift into consciousness. Prof. Hyslop cites the case of a woman living in Brooklyn who on looking into the crystal frequently had a vision of a bright blue sky, a garden with a wall fence and a peculiar chain pump in the garden. Later she went to her old home which she had not known since she was two or three years old and there, sure enough, were the chain pump, the wall fence and the bright blue sky.

One of the internationally famous crystal seers is Mrs. Verrall, for some time a lecturer in Newnham College, Cambridge, England, and known to the classical world as the translator of Pausanias. Mrs. Verrall has had many other entertaining psychical experiences, some of which enter into the long-expected revelations from Sir Oliver Lodge as to communications from the late F. W. H. Myers.

As regards crystal gazing Mrs. Verrall has found a cut crystal, a globular crystal, a glass paper weight or a glass of water to be equally effective. She says she is most likely to see things when the light is dim. She has occasionally seen pictures in fairly bright light, but never in absolute darkness. The practice is useful in Mrs. Verrall's case because she finds it a convenient way of recalling things she has forgotten. The picture once produced has a reality which she says she has never been able to obtain when looking into the fire or trying to call up an imaginary scene with eyes shut. Sometimes she has practised automatic writing while looking into the crystal. The Countess of Radnor and Miss Goodrich-Freer are other English women who have been susceptible of the apparitions of the crystal.

Without prejudice as to the origin of these visions or hallucinations Prof. Hyslop and other writers of the psychical research literature, of which a new book by the secretary and founder of the Society for Psychical Research is shortly to be issued by the Small, Maynard publishing house, regard them evidently as pertaining particularly to acute sensibility of temperament. "The limits of knowledge," he says, "are not exactly where Locke placed them, namely normal sensation and perception. Apparently the mind is sensitive to much else, or we cannot define the limits of sense perception. However this may be, crystal visions and similar phenomena bring us to the forced admission that we have not yet made the mysteries of mind as clear as preceding generations supposed."

The preservation, at all events, of such crystals as those at the Boston Museum of Fine Arts is an interesting indication of the entwining of material and immaterial in the history of art. Like so many of the relics of past civilizations they represent, with their beautiful settings, a remarkable decorative achievement, while when one considers their use, they call attention to the constant striving of the human mind to understand the Great Unknown.

TRICKING THE CAMERA.

Has ... Roosevelt Adopted the Ruses of Royalty?

From the San Francisco Call.

Can it be that President Roosevelt is following the precedent set by all monarchs short of inches and resorts to trick to make his mightiness seem a matter of measurement as well as of activity and erudition?

King Edward is the most illustrious practitioner of the theory that it is the divine right of kings to be as tall (pictorially represented) as are their subjects. In reality Edward is as short as the characteristic he inherited from his mother would make him, but when he has his picture taken the photographer knows enough to perform camera tricks that make Edward look taller than he is.

Roosevelt seems to be following this British example. In a recent number of Scribner's magazine he has an article on bear hunting in the Louisiana cane-brakes. One of the illustrations used in the article shows Roosevelt surrounded by his fellow-huntsmen. His head looms as high on the landscape as the head of any of his companions. Persons who have met Roosevelt know that he is not a tall man, so the first wonder is that men who are hunters by profession and who come from generations of southerners should average so few inches.

But investigation discloses something. Roosevelt is standing on a little hump of ground, the others are lower. As yet he has accused no one of being a "height faker."

ASSISTING THE SERVANTS

Novel Methods and Suggestions for Solving Domestic Problem.

Victor Smith in New York Press.

Some men take much pleasure in assisting household servants to do their work in ease and comfort. House telephones are quite common in the palaces of the rich. There is no more yelling up or down stairs for Marie, Jackson, Francois, Jeffreys or Constance. A telephone is in every room. THE third period of the season of introspection, Holy week, begins with today and consequently the annals of society will be of the most meager description. But, with the joyous Easter festivities in anticipation there remains for the society folk mostly the pleasant occupation of putting the finishing touches to the stunning new toilets for next Sunday's parade, provided they do not elect to attend the Lenten services.

The unique entertainment to be given by Madame Olga Burgtorf, tomorrow evening, comes as an especial boon to the social and musical circles of the city. Again, as in many times past, a vote of thanks is due the Colorado Springs Musical club for its enterprise in securing the services of so clever an impersonator and singer as Madame Burgtorf.

A [illegible] of the [illegible] music is given and during the lecture Madame Burgtorf sings a large number of songs, appropriately costuming herself according to the country represented in song.

Mrs. J. Dawson Hawkins has kindly consented to accompany Madame Burgtorf and she will preside at the piano for the evening. On account of this entertainment, the opera program of the Musical club was postponed one week and it will be given Monday evening, April 20, at Perkins hall where the program as tomorrow evening will [illegible].

Around Festive Board

Despite the fact that this is the lenten season, Miss Violet Gardner, one of the brides to be during Easter week, has been the recipient of considerable special social attention lately. Tuesday afternoon, Mrs. Henry Hine gave a charming little tea of about 20 guests in honor of Miss Gardner. Miss Westin presided at a table prettily decorated with spring blossoms and dispensed the fragrant beverage.

Another equally pleasant affair was the small, informal luncheon given on Friday by Miss Charlotte Hemenway, 17 West Del Norte street, in compliment to Miss Gardner.

The members of the First Christian church and congregation held a delightful reception in the parlors Thursday evening, in welcome to their new pastor, the Rev. James Mailley and wife. Mrs. Jasper N. Beaty and Mrs. David H. Fairley assisted Dr. and Mrs. Mailley in receiving. After six months without a pastor, the church people esteemed the occasion one particularly felicitous for establishing close ties of Christian fellowship.

Participating in the musical and literary program were Mrs. Clarence C. Hamlin, who rendered two soprano solos; Miss Meeker, violin solos, and Mrs. William Barber, recitations.

The Rev. Clark Bowers, pastor of the Colorado City Christian church, gave a hearty address of welcome, to which the Rev. Mr. Mailley made response in heartfelt and apropos words.

Pink carnations and asparagus plumosus were combined in the pretty arrangement of flowers upon the refreshment table. The ladies presiding were Mrs. Lula Bernard, Mrs. Thompson, Mrs. Merle Richmond and Mrs. Allen L. Burris.

To meet her sister, Miss Gladys Silsbee of Chicago, who will be her guest until after the Carpenter-Gardner marriage, Easter week, Mrs. Edward A. Rosenfelt entertained a company of young people at tea yesterday afternoon in her East Cache la Poudre street home.

In honor of Mrs. E. P. Stevens of Montreal, Canada, Mrs. William W. Williamson of Ivywild gave a charming tea on Friday afternoon. Among the guests were Mrs. H. Hoyt Stevens, Mrs. John E. White, Miss Lyttell, Mrs. Annette C. Peavey, Dr. Josephine L. Peavey, Mrs. Franklin E. Brooks, Mrs. Edward M. De La Vergne, Mrs. Robert Kerr, Mrs. Hart, Mrs. Thomas H. Pike, Miss Frances Rouse, Mrs. Edwin A. Sawyer, Mrs. John Speed Tucker, Mrs. Henry C. Lowe, Mrs. Edgar M. Marbourg, Mrs. James B. Gregg, Mrs. Jasper N. Beaty, Mrs. Lula Bernard, Mrs. Frederick A. Faust, Mrs. William Fowler.

Mr. and Mrs. Mortimer E. Serat entertained a party of friends at a dinner party given Thursday evening in the private dining room at the Antlers.

The house guests, also several of her friends, enjoyed an impromptu little informal dance Thursday evening, Miss Maynard's residence, on North Cascade avenue.

One of the pleasant social affairs of the week was given in compliment to Miss May Allen by Mrs. O. C. Hoyt, at her home on East Platte avenue, Thursday afternoon. About 20 of Miss Allen's friends were invited to take a cup of tea and Mrs. H. H. Atkins presided at the table and poured.

Among those invited were Mrs. H. L. [illegible], Miss Cowan, Mrs. Barker, Mrs. John Clark, Miss Ethel Clark, Mrs. [illegible] J. Moran, Mrs. William A. Campbell, Mrs. William H. Cobb, Miss Carolyn Woerner, Mrs. William Lennox, Mrs. Lewis P. Ehrich, Mrs. H. A. [illegible], Mrs. Martin Slaughter, Mrs. Willard S. Nichols, Mrs. George C. Holden, Mrs. E. B. Simmons, Mrs. William Lierd, Mrs. A. F. Stough, Mrs. Annie H. Kingsley, Mrs. Arthur [illegible], Mrs. H. A. Young, Mrs. Reese, Mrs. William E. Frybarger, Mrs. George [illegible] and the Misses Wilkins.

A [illegible] will be enjoyed by the [illegible] of the First Congregational church next Tuesday evening at 6:30 o'clock in the parish house. The guests of honor will be Mr. W. [illegible] Sweet of Denver and Dr. [illegible] Robinson of [illegible]. The committee having the affair in charge includes Mr. Albert [illegible] Mr. [illegible] Schneider, E. F. Schreiber, Dr. A. R. [illegible] and the Rev. James B. Gregg.

A permanent organization of the Colorado Springs Festival Chorus has been effected, officers elected and a brief constitution drawn up to admit of business transactions as ordered. The list of officers is as follows: President, Mrs. Kingsley Ballou; vice president, Mrs. Edward D. Hale; secretary, Mrs. Clement C. Dickey; treasurer, Mr. Thomas B. Strachan; librarian, Dr. John M. Curtis; musical director, Dean Edward D. Hale.

The festival advisory committee has most willingly consented to continue to serve, namely: Mr. Irving W. Bonbright, Dr. Alfred A. Blackman, Mr. J. Arthur Connell, Professor M. Clement Gile, President William F. Slocum, Mr. Philip B. Stewart, Mr. Charles B. Hall.

A meeting of the chorus will be held tomorrow evening at 7:30 o'clock with Mrs. Dickey, 108 East Monument street, instead of at Perkins hall on account of the Madame Bergtorf concert booked for that date by the Musical club. Members of the chorus will please be prompt in attendance at the rehearsal, thus giving those desiring to do so an opportunity for attending the concert.

Dean Hale will play a miscellaneous program Tuesday afternoon at 5 o'clock in recital hall, Perkins building. There will be a Rubinstein group, including a Barcarole, the Kamennoi Ostrow and a study from op. 23; a song without words of Seebeck and the Tremolo Etude of Gottschalk.

A week later, there will be a Wagner program, a transcription by Liszt, Bendel and Brassin. The public is cordially invited to listen to these programs.

The second in the series of musicales given by the pupils of Miss Ida E. [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] Washington avenue, Friday night. The program consisted of solos, duets and quartets.

Those taking part were Annetta Clear, Dalie Clear, Alice Callihan, Gladys Hitchcock, Rose Harrington, Ina Language, Fred Roberts, Elmo Stanton, Howard Shepherd, Annie Anderson, Glennie Sibert, Irma Fowler, Irene Sellergren, Virginia Mosley, Mary L. Kistler.

"Greek and Roman Music" was the subject of the lecture given last week by Mrs. Clement C. Dickey. It was ably illustrated by piano duets rendered by Mrs. Dickey and Mrs. Jessop, Mrs. Virgin. Ball sang a classic song written by Handel.

Mrs. Dickey lectures next Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock in her home, 108 East Monument street, and subject "[illegible] in Music." Mrs. Ball will sing Shakespearean songs and Mrs. Dickey and Mrs. Jessop will play illustrative piano duets.

Engagements--Married

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Gardner have issued invitations for the marriage of their daughter, Miss Helen Violet Gardner, to Mr. Louis Gebb Carpenter. The ceremony will be performed on Wednesday evening, April 22, at 8 o'clock in St. Stephen's church. The young couple will reside in this city after a brief honeymoon trip abroad.

Miss Bessie Louise Turner was married to Mr. Thedon Samuel Barnes, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clement H. Barnes, Wednesday evening, in the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles V. Turner, [illegible] North Weber street. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Thomas C. Kirkwood, D. D., and there were no attendants.

The young couple entered the parlor as the bride's mother played the bridal chorus from "Lohengrin" and [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] an artistic embankment of palms and Easter lilies, adorned with asparagus [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

The bride was attired in a [illegible] gown of white Irish point embroidery and carried a shower bouquet of bride's roses, lilies of the valley and maidenhair ferns. After the witnesses, just the immediate relatives of the young couple, had tendered congratulations, a wedding supper was served.

Mr. and Mrs. Barnes departed upon a trip to Glenwood Springs and will be at home to their friends after June 1 in a home they intend to select soon after their return. A number of the young friends of Mr. and Mrs. Barnes were at the station to see them off and showered them with rice and confetti, besides treating them to a variety of mischievous pranks, such as decorating their trunks with old shoes, ribbons, placards, etc.

Miss Belle Gardner, formerly of this city, was united in marriage on February 24 to Mr. H. William Maddox, general manager of the Union Trust Mining and Development company, of Los Angeles, Cal. The ceremony was performed in Los Angeles, where the newly wedded couple will make their home.

At the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Adelbert H. Whaite, 1612 East Twenty-second avenue, Denver, next Wednesday evening at 6 o'clock, their daughter, Miss Hazelle Chaffee Whaite, is to be married to Mr. Frederick Henry Royer, eldest son of Mrs. Marie Reyer of this city, the Rev. O'Malley officiating. Supper will be served and the young couple will then leave upon a short trip.

Formal--Informal

The High School players gave a most creditable presentation of the celebrated farce, "Charley's Aunt," Thursday night in the Opera House, and for the benefit of those unable to attend, then, it was repeated yesterday afternoon in the auditorium of the High School before a packed house.

With the laudable intent to liquidate the indebtedness of the Athletic association, all interested put forth strenuous endeavors to produce a play sure to amuse and draw a crowd and admirably did the young people succeed.

Unstinted praise is heard on all sides, not only for the principals in the enterprise, but those who by disposing of the tickets and attending, themselves, assisted in the complete success. Certainly, "Charley's Aunt" was one of the cleverest amateur productions ever given to an audience in Colorado Springs.

The dance of the Colorado Springs B. P. O. E. No. 309, given Wednesday evening in the handsome club house, was attended by a large crowd and the time was delightfully spent in dancing to excellent music furnished by Fink's orchestra.

An appetizing collation was served during intermission, and while in the dining room the guests were afforded an opportunity for inspecting the handsome large collection of plates contributed at the time of the "plate social" last month. The entertainment committee is planning a "fiesta" or something upon that order, to be given in May.

The Christmas club spent a delightful afternoon last Friday at the home of Mrs. G. B. Irvin, 808 East Monument street. Mrs. Edward Peck was the special guest of the occasion, and she [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] member of the club.

A delicious luncheon was served by the hostess, with Mrs. Macgargee assisting. Mrs. M. S. Dannevik officiated as toastmistress. A meeting of the club will be held with Mrs. H. C. Kob, 834 East Dale street, Friday, April 17, at 2:30 p. m.

The Sewing club met on Friday afternoon in the home of Miss Jewel Dannevik, 1912 North Nevada avenue. Arrangements were made for an evening party on Thursday next at the residence of Miss Ethel Whitaker, 115 East Dale street. Upon that occasion the guests of honor will be the husbands or gentlemen friends of the members of the club, and the diversion will be the game of five hundred.

At the Card Tables

The Saturday Social club met last week with Mrs. Ralph C. Bradfield at the Colchester. Mrs. Frank S. Banks of Denver was a special guest. The first prize, an old Dutch plate, was won by Mrs. Floyd F. Healey; the second, a cut-glass candlestick, by Mrs. D. S. Gilmore. A delicious two-course lunch was served by the hostess. Mrs. Samuel J. Deal, 417 East Kiowa street, will be the hostess Saturday afternoon, April 18.

Mrs. Henry W. Mclure, 1824 North Cascade avenue, entertained the Eucalne club Thursday afternoon. Daffodils and asparagus plumosa were selected as the floral decorations.

The prizes were distributed as follows: First, a lunch cloth, Mrs. H. A. Hamilton; second, a large lace [illegible], Miss C. E. Smith; third, a set of tumblers, Mrs. D. P. Strickler. The next meeting will be held in the home of Mrs. Ferd L. Gutmann, 222 North Weber street, Thursday afternoon, April 23.

The members of the Bridge club [illegible] [illegible] the hospitality of Mrs. [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] West [illegible] [illegible] Wednesday afternoon. Mrs. Frank G. Peck received the first prize, a handsome embroidered jabot; Mrs. Winfield S. Boynton, the second, a china mayonnaise bowl. Wednesday afternoon, April 22, Mrs. H. F. Avery, 1435 North Tejon street, will be the hostess.

The Five Hundred club met last week with Mrs. N. L. Gilmore, 919 East St. Vrain street. Miss Smith captured the player's prize, a hand-painted plate, and the hostess' prize was a hand-painted vase. Friday afternoon, the club meeting was held with Mrs. Ralph C. Barnes, 218 North Weber street.

The Practice Bridge club met last Wednesday afternoon with Mrs. Arthur Perkins, 1215 North Tejon street. This week's meeting will be at the home of Miss Harriet Sheafor, 122 East Uintah street.

Miss Hazelle Chaffee Whaite, formerly of this city, was the guest of honor at a bridge tea given yesterday afternoon in Denver by Mrs. August H. Hoeffer.

A Collect for Club Women.

KEEP us, O God, from pettishness; let us be large in thought, in word, in deed.

Let us be done with fault-finding and leave off self-seeking.

May we put away all pretense, and meet each other face to face,—without self-pity and without prejudice.

May we be never hasty in judgment and always generous.

Let us take time for all things; make us to grow calm, serene, gentle.

Teach us to put into action our better impulses, straightforward and unafraid.

Grant that we may realize it is the little things that create differences; that in the big things of life we are at one.

And may we strive to touch and to know the great common woman's heart of us all, and, O Lord, God, let us forget not to be kind!—Mary Stuart.

HUMAN LIFE'S MYSTERY.

We sow the glebe, we reap the corn,
We build the house where we may rest,
And then, at moments, suddenly,
We look up to the great wide sky,
Inquiring wherefore we were born—
For earnest or for jest?

The senses folding thick and dark
About the stifled soul within,
We guess diviner things beyond,
And yearn to them with yearning fond;
We strike out blindly to a mark
Believed in, but not seen.

We vibrate to the pant and thrill
Wherewith eternity has curled
In serpent-twine about God's seat;
While, freshening upward to His feet,
In gradual growth His full-leaved will Expands from world to world.

And, in the tumult and excess
Of act and passion under sun,
We sometimes hear—oh, soft and far,
As silver star did touch with star,
The kiss of peace and righteousness
Through all things that are done.

God keeps His holy mysteries
Just on the outside of man's dream;
In diapason slow, we think
To hear their pinions rise and sink,
While they float pure beneath His eyes,
Like swans adown a stream.

Abstractions, are they, from the forms
Of His great beauty?—exaltations
From His Great glory?—strong previsions
Of what we shall be?—intuitions
Of what we are—in calms and storms,
Beyond our peace and passions?

Things nameless! which, in passing so,
Do stroke us with a subtle grace,
We say, "Who passes?"—they are dumb.
We cannot see them go or come.
Their touches fall soft, cold, as snow
Upon a blind man's face.

Yet, touching so, they draw above
Our common thoughts to Heaven unknown;
Our daily joy and pain, advance
To a devine significance—
Our human love—O mortal love,
That light is not its own!

And, sometimes, horror chills our blood
To be so near such mystic things,
And we wrap round us, for defense,
Our purple manners, moods of sense,
As angels, from the face of God,
Stand hidden in their wings.

And, sometimes, through life's heavy swound
We grope for them, with strangled breath
We stretch our hands abroad and try
To reach them in our agony,
And widen, so, the broad life-wound
Which soon is large enough for death.
—Elizabeth Barrett Browning.

WHAT IS TO COME?

What is to come we know not. But we know
That what has been was good—was good to show,
Better to hide, and best of all to bear.
We are the masters of the days that were;
We have lived, we have loved, we have suffered ... even so.

Shall we not take the ebb who had the flow?
Life was our friend. Now, if it be our foe—
Dear, though it spoil and break us!—need we care
What is to come?

Let the great winds their worst and wildest blow,
Or the gold weather round us mellow slow;
We have fulfilled ourselves, and we can dare
And we can conquer, though we may not share
In the rich quiet of the afterglow
What is to come.
—W. E. Henley.

JEWEL CREATIONS NOW WORN IN EUROPE

Jeweled tassels are all the rage. They are made of pearl fringes with diamond tops, which generally have a couple of lines of flat or calabres cut stones going around them. They are used to finish the ends of long platinum and pearl chains that are worn twisted around the neck, or may be seen hanging from brooches and pendants.

The Empire necklaces of diamond clasps, threaded with black ribbon velvet three-eighths of an inch wide, which are being spoken of as a novelty, were in reality designed by the famous Parisian jeweler, Cartier, a couple of years ago. They were intended to be worn with collarless gowns and are fastened high up on the neck under the chin. The idea was suggested by a portrait of Sir Joshua Reynolds, in the Wallace collection, so that they were originally called Reynolds' necklaces.

DRUNKENNESS A Curable Disease

Eminent Physicians and Scientific Men Agree That It Should Be Treated as Such.

Drunkenness is a progressive disease; the moderate drinker is not satisfied with two or three drinks a day, the craving for more and more becomes irresistible as the disease advances; the result is Chronic Alcoholism.

The treatment used successfully by thousands right in their own homes is Orrine. It is a scientific cure for Drunkenness and has given such universal satisfaction that it is sold under a positive guarantee to effect a cure or your money will be refunded. This guarantee is given in good faith and is carried out to the letter. Orrine is not a new remedy; it has been sold by the leading druggists in every city for years. It has lifted tens of thousands from the depths to worthy manhood and has the hearty indorsement of grateful men and women in every state in the Union.

Orrine No. 1 is the secret remedy; Orrine No. 2 is for those willing to take the treatment. Either form costs $1.00. The guarantee is the same in either case. Write to The Orrine Co., Washington, D. C., for free treatise on Drunkenness, mailed in plain sealed envelope. Orrine will be mailed sealed on receipt of price. Sold by the leading druggists in every town and city, and in this city by the D. Y. Butcher Drug Co.

NEW WOMAN'S CLUB IN PARIS.

Paris Letter in New York Tribune.

Parisiennes are watching with a great deal of interest and some amusement the debut of the new women's club—the first of its kind in the French capital—the Paris Lyceum. It had taken more than two years' hard work to get the enterprise launched, and it was soon discovered that the committee must look for support chiefly, if not entirely to the foreign contingent. French women are extraordinarily conservative. They have never had a club of their own, and they could not be induced to believe that such an institution would be of any use to them. The Dowager Duchesse d'Uzes and a few other social leaders finally consented to lend their names, and the duchesse was elected president, with the result that on the day when the club at last was ready for its public and threw open its doors to the upper ten thousand of the city a large contingent of natives was seen in the handsome drawing-rooms. The subscription list, however, shows that, as expected, the large majority of members are of English speaking nationality.

Though lodged with less outward splendor than the parent house in London, the Paris Lyceum is handsomely installed in a modest looking three-storied house in the quiet Rue de la Bienfaisance, almost under the shadow of the fine Church of St. Augustin. Once inside the great polished doors, which admit the visitor into a lofty outer courtyard under the east side of the house, you recognize at once that you are in a house with a history. The walls of this court are hung with fine old Spanish embossed leather, with richly carved wooden supports and handsome eighteenth century bronze lamp brackets. In the house itself there are doors, panels and chimney pieces of ancient and exquisite workmanship that have evidently been brought together by a collector with both taste and knowledge. Such alterations as had to be made to fit the house for its present purpose were made with the utmost care, and as far as possible the original aspect of the rooms has been preserved. Only the modern light green paper of the salon seems a little out of keeping with the charming painted ceiling, to which the new electric light fittings do but scant justice.

The house is, in fact, the property of a now aged prince of the Second Empire, who has granted to the club a lease for six years, but intends to end his days in the house sooner or later. It was he who brought together all the beautiful decorations of the place, and here he lived a romantic love story of his own. The idyl ending abruptly, he fled from Paris to sail his yacht in oriental waters, and the dainty suites of rooms, with their quaint and luxurious fittings, are now occupied by a handful of American and English women who are making Paris a stage in their European travels.

Meantime the city of Paris keeps a jealous eye on the house, and the governor of the ... has offered 10,000 francs for the woodwork of the library alone. The door of this magnificent apartment contains nine small square panels of French fifteenth century carving, representing mediaeval figures wielding primitive implements. These are framed in oblong panels of a later period of elegant Renaissance style of garlands of flowers and foliage in high relief. The whole of the massive doorway and above, reaching to the raftered ceiling, is the same richly carved wood. Another of the curiosities of the house is a small room on the second floor whose walls are entirely covered with old and precious Delft tiles, in their soft, fine blue. These tiles bear quaint Biblical designs, and below each little picture is carefully inscribed in old characters the chapter and verse illustrated. There are only eight bedrooms in the house, all different in shape, size and decoration and practically unchanged as regards decoration. If the new club promises to be a success and the demand for bedrooms warrants the expense, the roof will be raised and another story added.

Much anxious consideration has been given by the committee to the lines on which the Lyceum should be run. It was finally decided to close its doors and membership list to women of the theatrical profession without exception; a decision that has been a good deal criticised in certain circles here. On the other hand, the club offered the hospitality of its premises to the select few women members of the Alpine club, a body hitherto homeless. The Alpine club, as every one knows, does not admit to its premises the small band of women, they are only 25 in number—who were considered worthy by their prowess on Alp and Himalaya to bear the title. By taking this step, the Lyceum has included in its body a very interesting if small section of women. The Alpinists are to be admitted to sit on the committee, and the title of the club will include and incorporate their name.

It is unquestionable that the club will afford a very useful and pleasant social center for the large body of women of foreign extraction who for one reason or another live in Paris. Artist members will have the privilege of exposing on its walls their work, and ceramists and glassworkers can in the same way send in specimens of their skill. Moreover, it is hoped that the dinner, which is ... English fashion by English cooks and waitresses at three shillings a head, will be found a great boon to those who would otherwise eat at a restaurant. Neither of these inducements, however, appeals to the Parisiennes, who would be warmly welcomed to the club. They all have their own homes here and as many friends as they care to cultivate.

And as for the convenient and fairly central position of the Lyceum, it must be remembered that Paris is not very large and the means of communication between various quarters are fairly good and fairly rapid. After a fitting at her dressmaker's or a round of calls the Parisienne is more inclined to drive in one of the cosy auto-taxicabs to her own home than to a club. Then, too, the French woman lives in much closer ... with her family than any other woman in the world. It would be entirely foreign to her habits to separate herself from her father, brother or husband to spend hours in a club whose threshold these relatives could hardly cross, and she is frankly unwilling to surround herself at any time exclusively with members of her own sex. The Parisienne lives on pleasant terms with her ... acquaintances, but she seldom forms strong friendships or real intimacies with any. She will join hands with the rest of her sex for some definite charitable object, but, the object once attained, all fall apart again. ... will ... a day on which to receive callers, but even the women of whom she sees the most will be inflexibly turned down at her door with a firm "Not at home" if they venture to ring her bell on any other day of the week or month. What ... then, could such a creature be expected to make of a woman's club? It may surely be ... Lyceum and Alpine club ... its foreign and not its French members.

THE DOVE.

There sitteth a dove so white and fair,
All on the lily spray,
And she listeneth how, to Jesus Christ,
The little children pray.

Lightly she spreads her friendly wings,
And to heaven's gate hath sped,
And unto the Father in heaven she bears,
The prayers which the children have said.

And back she comes from heaven's gate,
And brings—that dove so mild—
From the Father in heaven, who hears her speak,
A blessing for every child.

Then, children, lift up a pious prayer,
It hears whatever you say,
That heavenly dove, so white and fair,
That sits on the lily spray.
—Frederika Bremer.

LEARN TO LIVE IN BEAUTY.

To every man there comes noble thoughts that pass across his heart like great white birds. But, unfortunately, they do not count; they are strangers whom we are surprised to see, whom we dismiss with an impatient gesture. Their time is too short to touch our life.

Our soul will not be so earnest and deep searching as is the soul of the angels, because we have, for one short moment seen the universe in the shadow of death or eternity, in the radiance of joy or the flames of beauty and love.

We have all known moments such as these, but they have left behind only worthless ashes. These thoughts must become habits with us, for they are useless when they come only in glimpses. We must learn to live in a beauty, an earnestness, that shall have become part of ourselves.

In life there is no creature so degraded that it does not know what is the noble and beautiful thing to do, but the noble and beautiful is not strong within him.

It is this invisible and abstract strength which we first of all must cultivate within ourselves, and it grows only in those who have learned to dwell, more frequently than others, upon the heights where life absorbs the soul, upon the summits whence we see that every act and every thought are infallibly bound up with something great and immortal.

Learn to look upon men and things with the inner eye, with its form and desire, never forgetting that the shadow they throw as they pass by, upon hillock or wall, is but the fleeting image of a mightier shadow, which, like the wing of an immortal swan, floats over every soul that draws near to their soul.

Do not think that such thoughts can be mere ornaments and without effect on the lives of those who admit them. It is far more important that one's life should be perceived than that it should be transformed, for no sooner has it been perceived than it transforms itself of its own accord.

These thoughts of which I speak make up the secret treasure of heroism and on the day when life compels us to disclose this treasure, we are startled to find therein no forces other than those by which we are impelled toward perfect beauty.

Then it is no longer necessary that a great king should die for us to remember that "the world does not end at the house doors," and not an evening passes but the smallest thing suffices to ennoble the soul.

But it is not by telling yourself that God is great and that you move in His radiance that you will be able to live in the beauty and fertile depths where the heroes dwell.

You may perhaps remind yourself day and night that the hands of all the invisible powers are waving over your head like a tent with innumerable folds, and yet shall the least gesture of these hands be imperceptible to you.

You must be keenly vigilant, and you had better watch in the market place than slumber in the temple. Beauty and grandeur are everywhere, for it needs but an unexpected incident to reveal them to us.

MAURICE MAETERLINCK.

WIVES.

Three men of wealth meeting not long since in New York, the conversation turned upon their wives. Instead of finding fault with women in general, and their wives in particular, each one obeyed the wise man's advice, and "gave honor unto his wife."

"I tell you what it is," said one of the men, "they may say what they please about the uselessness of modern women, but my wife has done her share in securing our success in life.

"Everybody knows that her family was aristocratic and expensive, and all that, and when I married her she had never done a day's work in her life, but when W. & Co. failed, and I had to commence at the foot of the hill again she discharged the servants and chose but a neat little cottage, and did her own housekeeping until I was better off."

"And my wife," said a second, "was an only daughter, caressed and petted to death, and everybody said, 'Well, if he will marry a doll like that, he'll make the greatest mistake in his life,' but when I came home the first year of marriage, sick with fever, she nursed me back to health, and I never knew her to murmur because I thought we couldn't afford any better style or more luxuries."

"Well, gentlemen," chimed in a third, "I married a smart, healthy, pretty girl, but she was a regular blue-stocking. She adored Tennyson, doted on Byron, read Emerson, and named the first baby Ralph Waldo Emerson, and the second Maud, but, I tell you what 'tis," and the speaker's eyes grew suspiciously moist, "when we laid little Maud in her last bed at Auburn my poor wife had no remembrance of neglect or stinted motherly care, and the little dresses that still lie in the locked drawer were all made by her own hands."

PASS IT AROUND.

Many years ago, while passing one of the crowded thoroughfares in the shopping district of a large city, two ladies were overheard in conversation. One remarked, "Let a good thing pass around. That means that when a person does you a kindness it is not always necessary to return them the kindness, but do a kindness to someone who needs it."

Those words have influenced the life of the hearer, then a young woman, and she has learned that true charity is not merely giving money, for sometimes those must in need are those whom a friendly recognition, a sympathetic word, timely advice, or even a smile can help smooth the pathway of life and make the tired, lonely one feel that life is truly worth living, for some one cares.—Mary P. Moore in Modern World.

SCENE IN FIRST ACT OF JOE WEBER'S PRODUCTION OF "DREAM CITY," AT THE OPERA HOUSE FRIDAY

FRANCIS WILSON RETURNS AFTER LONG ABSENCE

Plays and Players

Grace George, one of the finest comediennes now before the public, made a great artistic success in Denver last week in Sardou's "Divorcons." Critics claimed her performance of Cyprienne to be the finest ever given to the public. Miss George does not come to Colorado Springs this season.

The Shuberts announce that two additional companies will be immediately organized to play "Girls," the latest effort of Clyde Fitch, which is now running at Daly's in New York. One of the companies will open a run at the Garrick in Chicago, at the earliest possible date, while the other will be sent to the Pacific coast.

An announcement that is of more than ordinary interest has been made by Manager S. N. Nye of the Opera House. Mary Mannering will come to Colorado Springs early in May in her great success, "Glorious Betsy," a play of an American girl who falls in love with the great Napoleon. Miss Mannering has not been seen in this city for four years, but she has now joined the trust, and consequently, cannot enter any heretofora forbidden city. Miss Mannering is by no means a great actress, but she is one of those few who are most pleasing to see. Hence her coming to this city is looked forward to with no little anticipation.

George M. Cohan returned to the stage last Thursday evening, when his new musical play, "The Yankee Prince," was produced at Parsons theater, Hartford, Conn. The opening performance marked the reunion of the Cohan family, the author's sister rejoining her father, mother and brother. The reason of Sister Josephine's leaving the famous four, is said to have been on account of the marriage of Ethel Levey and George Cohan. As this couple were divorced last fall, it is said that Josephine is willing to become a partner [illegible] more. The cast of "The Yankee Prince" includes Jack Gardner, Tom Lewis and Sam Ryan of "Little Johnny Jones" fame, Estelle Wentworth, Stella Hammerstein and others.

One of Francis Wilson's hobbies is the accumulation of his library, is his custom of purchasing works of contemporaneous authors and sending them to the writers with a request that they write their autograph and add a trifle of verse, prose or a letter on the fly leaf. In this way the popular comedian has secured an almost invaluable collection. Francis Wilson is also an ardent collector of curios. His collection of souvenirs of Napoleon is said to be wonderfully complete, and besides articles owned by Napoleon, there are several autograph letters, not only signed by the emperor himself, but by many members of his family. Francis Wilson will be seen at the Opera House April 14, in his new farce, by Charles Marlowe, "When Knights Were Bold."

Little Chip and Mary Marble supported by a large company, will soon make their appearance at the Opera House in "Dream City." The music of this play is by Victor Herbert, and it enjoyed a long run at the Weber theater in New York last year. The story tells of Herr Dinglebender, a Long Island truck farmer, of Teutonic extraction, too lazy to work, and too idle to think, who received an offer for his farm from a real estate dealer, who plans to convert it from an empty waste to a modern city. Dinglebender falls asleep and dreams that all this has been accomplished. The second part of the entertainment is devoted to this magic city, and the unique and laughable situations which develop may easily be imagined.

Ethel Johnson, who created the part of the Merry Widow in this country, has played that role so much that she is entirely worn out, and last week was compelled to drop out of the cast for a complete rest. Lina Abarbanell, the Viennese prima donna, formerly of the Metropolitan Grand Opera company, and who created the part with the Chicago "The Merry Widow" company, has been transferred to the New York cast. She is said to do the role better than Miss Johnson—at least those who have seen both performers say so. Rena Dale, who has been studying the title role with a view to taking it in one of the companies to be put forward in one of the large eastern cities, has been put at the head of the Chicago company. Miss Dale will be remembered for the stunning and dashing interpretation she gave to the part of the Widow in "The Prince of Pilsen," as seen here last September. She should make a most fascinating Sonia.

THE WEEK'S OFFERINGS

Madame Olga Burgtorf.
(Monday.)

Mme. Burgtorf will be heard in Perkins hall tomorrow evening under the auspices of the Colorado Springs Musical club. Her entertainment is unique, as she gives a program of folk songs, and also a short talk explaining them. It should prove most interesting.

"When Knights Were Bold."
(Tuesday.)

Francis Wilson makes his first appearance in this city for many years Tuesday evening. He is no longer in musical comedy, but in legitimate work. His vehicle is by Charles Marlowe. It takes the hero, in a dream, from the present day into centuries ago.

"The Dream City."
(Friday.)

This is not, as its name might imply, a Biblical play on the order of "The Holy City," but a most entertaining musical comedy by Edgar Smith and Victor Herbert. Joe Weber is manager and has provided a good cast headed by Little Chip and Mary Marble.

THE grand opera season, proper, in New York closed a week ago last night, with the performance by the Conried Metropolitan Grand Opera company. The Hammerstein company ended its season a week earlier, as it opened a week earlier than the other company. The closing of the season brings many things forcibly to view. The Conried company has never given the New York public a worse season, while the Hammerstein force, while only in its second year, has done wonders. This latter company has accomplished a great work for grand opera in New York. For many years the Metropolitan organization had the grand opera field in New York entirely to itself, and it was getting into a rut, and a very deep one at that. Had it not been for the rude awakening that the newer company gave the old and established troupe, it is not unlikely that in a few years opera in New York would have reached such a level that New York could no longer lay claim to being one of the greatest opera centers in the world, as it now does.

Besides doing this, Hammerstein and his company have done further. Operas, the latest modern works, which no one heretofore has dared touch for fear of loss, were produced by Hammerstein, and thus he gave to the opera-going public of New York an opportunity to see and know the latest compositions in the realm of opera. Furthermore he brought Tetrazzini to this country while she is still in the height of her powers. Besides Tetrazzini, Hammerstein brought other singers of great worth, many of whom Conried probably never would have discovered, such as Zenatello, Mary Garden, Renaud, De Cisneros, Bonci, whom Conried later got away from him, Dalmores and others. To his credit is also the coming to this country of Campanini, the conductor, whose like is said not to exist. To this conductor is due not a little of the success of the opera season at the Manhattan Opera house.

New York is on the verge of a general eruption in the opera field, and this indicates good results for the entire country. Hammerstein intends to enlarge his field next year. Instead of confining his whole season to New York, he will, at the close or the beginning of his operatic year, visit other cities, Philadelphia, Boston, Chicago, will have their seasons, and even Denver is a possibility.

The coming of these large companies into the more important cities of each state means that the smaller cities will also have the benefit of real grand opera, for railroad excursions are already being planned by the promoters. Henry W. Savage is also to become one of the important figures in grand opera in this country next season. He is at present in Europe organizing his company which will tour the country next season, playing two nights in each town visited instead of one, as has been the former custom in the smaller cities like Colorado Springs. His repertoire will contain some of the best operas, both new and old, and his singers will be even better than those heard in "Madam Butterfly" last February in this city.

Madame Olga Burgtorf will appear at Perkins hall tomorrow evening under the auspices of the Colorado Springs Musical club. Mme. Burgtorf offers an unusually interesting program and her entertainment is unique. She sings the various folk songs in costume, and also gives a short talk explaining each.

Francis Wilson comes to the Opera House Tuesday evening in a farce entitled "When Knights Were Bold." Mr. Wilson has not been seen here for a great many years, and the younger generation of playgoers are not familiar with his work unless they have seen him elsewhere. Up to last year he starred in light and comic opera and his artistic success was as great as that of any serious or legitimate actor then before the public. He began legitimate work in comedy last season in "The Mountain Climber," but his present vehicle, "When Knights Were Bold," is said to give him as great opportunities as he ever had in comic opera. The other attraction "The Dream City," is one of Weber's famous productions and is played by a strong company headed by Little Chip and Mary Marble. This is the production in which Madame Lillian Blauvelt made her "dip" into the burlesque field, but quickly got out of it as soon as she could. "The Dream City" should prove a most interesting attraction.

What Press Agents Say

FRANCIS WILSON IN
"WHEN KNIGHTS WERE BOLD"

When one remembers the rare fun in "Charley's Aunt," the big comedy success of a decade ago, it is a pleasure to chronicle the advent of another laughing play, and this one, it has been stated, is even funnier than the one first mentioned. It is "When Knights Were Bold," a comedy by Charles Marlowe, in which Charles Frohman is this season presenting the popular comedian Francis Wilson. The fun is presented in three installments, acts first and third showing the Knights' room in Beechwood Towers, while the locale of act second is on the battlements of the castle, but seven hundred and ten years prior to the action of acts first and third. Not since he deserted comic opera has Mr. Wilson been so fortunate in finding a vehicle, for the lines are bright and the complications are such that the star has every opportunity. In writing the farce, the author has chosen to satirize the inordinate love of ancestry which afflicts so many people of the present day, and in the telling of his story, Mr. Marlowe has presented a young Englishman who has just succeeded to the titles and estates of a long line of honored ancestors and who is being continually censured by his associates, especially by his sweetheart, the Lady Rowena Eggington, because of his faint resemblance to his chivalric and brave forbears. To add piquancy to the love story, the hero, Sir Guy de Vere, has a rival for his sweetheart's hand in the person of a penniless fortune-hunting Irish baronet, who almost succeeds in winning the lady. A too liberal indulgence in whisky-and-water taken to break up a severe cold, projects the young hero into a dream, in which he maintains his own ultra modern personality amid all of the surroundings of the twelfth century and to make things more complicated, all of the characters of the first act are present in the second, but they are their own ancestral prototypes. The comic possibilities of such a situation are obvious and the fun-making proceeds hilariously until the climax is reached when the young modern is called upon to fight a duel with the stalwart Irish knight of the twelfth century in full armor and thoroughly competent to wield the tremendous two-handed sword of the period. This forces Sir Guy to don armor himself, but, as he quaintly puts it, he cannot fight like a "canned lobster," so taking off the armor, he vanquishes his own rival in most approved twentieth century fashion, with his fists, putting the Irish knight "down and out" in a very short space of time. In the last act, Sir Guy turns the tables on everybody by assuming all of the extravagant manners of his ancestors to the utter discomfiture of his rival, whose cowardice is promptly exposed and so successfully that even his fair cousin is forced to admit that the present day manner and customs are pretty good after all. The opportunities afforded Mr. Wilson, as Sir Guy de Vere, are almost unlimited and his delightful personality, mannerisms and methods are seen to exceptional advantage. Indeed, it is everywhere said that he has done nothing so good as Sir Guy since he deserted comic opera. The company with which Mr. Frohman has surrounded Francis Wilson, is, it is stated, one of exceptional strength, being made up entirely of players who have already won their laurels. His leading woman is Mary Boland, and in the long cast are to be found the names of Clarence Handysides, Campbell Colan, George Irving, Augustin Duncan, Joseph Allen, Victor Benoit, J. C. Robinson, Edna Bruns, Margaret Gordon, Margherita Sargent, Rae Arnold, Ruth Barry and others. The company is a large one, for in addition to the cast a big chorus is carried. Charles Frohman presents Francis Wilson at the Opera House Tuesday evening.

JOE WEBER'S "THE DREAM CITY"

Amusement lovers will be offered a rare treat in the musical line next Tuesday evening when Joe Weber's latest and most successful production, "Dream City," comes to the Opera House.

Of all the much talked of Weber productions there has never been one that has met with the universal success of "Dream City," which packed Weber's cozy little theater at every performance all last season in New York. There is a certain something in the makeup and general tenor to "Dream City," that is not only far from ordinary in a musi-

FREE TO YOU—MY SISTER

Free to You and Every Sister Suffering from Woman's Ailments.

I am a woman.
I know woman's sufferings.
I have found the cure.
I will mail, free of any charge, my home treatment with full instructions to any sufferer from woman's ailments. I want to tell all women about this cure—you, my reader, for yourself, your daughter, your mother, or your sister. I want to tell you how to cure yourselves at home without the help of a doctor. Men cannot understand women's sufferings. What we women know from experience, we know better than any doctor. I know that my home treatment is a safe and sure cure for Leucorrhoea or Whitish discharges, Ulceration, Displacement or Falling of the Womb, Profuse, Scanty or Painful Periods, Uterine or Ovarian Tumors or Growths; also pains in the head, back and bowels, bearing down feelings, nervousness, creeping feeling up the spine, melancholy, desire to cry, hot flashes, weariness, kidney and bladder troubles where caused by weaknesses peculiar to our sex.

I want to send you a complete ten day's treatment entirely free to prove to you that you can cure yourself at home, easily, quickly and surely. Remember, that it will cost you nothing to give the treatment a complete trial; and if you should wish to continue, it will cost you only about 12 cents a week, or less than two cents a day. It will not interfere with your work or occupation. Just send me your name and address, tell me how you suffer if you wish, and I will send you the treatment for your case, entirely free, in plain wrapper, by return mail. I will also send you free of cost, my book—"WOMAN'S OWN MEDICAL ADVISER" with explanatory illustrations showing why women suffer, and how they can easily cure themselves at home. Every woman should have it, and learn to think for herself. Then when the doctor says—"You must have an operation," you can decide for yourself. Thousands of women have cured themselves with my home remedy. It cures all, old or young. To Mothers of Daughters, I will explain a simple home treatment which speedily and effectually cures Leucorrhoea, Green Sickness and Painful or Irregular Menstruation in Young Ladies. Plumpness and health always results from its use.

Wherever you live, I can refer you to ladies of your own locality who know and will gladly tell any sufferer that this Home Treatment really cures all women's diseases, and makes women well, strong, plump and robust. Just send me your address, and the free ten day's treatment is yours, also the book. Write today, as you may not see this offer again. Address ral production, but carries an attractiveness that never fails to please.

The story, in brief, is that of one of those self-satisfied Long Island German farmers that, through a more than smooth-talking real estate boomer, is jolled into a comfortable doze which carries him into a dream of the future greatness, as a city of his farming property and the surrounding territory. The way that clever author and librettist, Edgar Smith, has worked this theme out, with the aid of Victor Herbert's splendid and catchy music, makes the performance one of the most attractive and pleasing of its kind yet tendered the American stage.

As Mr. Weber himself has announced his retirement from the stage, he has been more than successful in securing, as his successor, that clever comedian, Little Chip. Little Chip is too well known and admired by theater-goers the country over to need further introduction, particularly through his excellent work the past few seasons with "Babes in Toyland" and "Wonderland."

Another particularly attractive feature with the "Dream City" party is the presence and charm of that magnetic and versatile little comedienne, Miss Mary Marble, who plays the part of Nancy, the old German's daughter. In this character of Nancy, Miss Marble finds one of the most congenial and attractive parts that she has ever portrayed, and her applaudable work is so engaging that in many instances this popular and genius-gifted actress is, in more than one instance, the center of all admiration. On the other hand, the makeup and personnel of the entire company presenting "Dream City" is far from ordinary and embraces many other Broadway favorites, to say nothing of the celebrated bevy of female beauties comprising the chorus, for which a Weber show has always been famous, and this year's crop seems to surpass all the previous efforts.

In unfolding the story of "Dream City," the auditor is carried from the beauties and atmosphere of the pretty Long Island farm to the gorgeous settings and trappings and stage glories and accessories of the imaginary "Dream City" which has pictured itself in the simple old German's mind. Here we find everything modern and ahead of the time that the mind could picture, from female messenger service in tights, female policemen ditto, golden streets ablaze with multicolored electric lights, and for service of any kind a ready-to-hand nickel-in-the-slot machine prepared for instant action. In fact, Mr. Smith's interesting story carries one into the mysteries of the future and the wonderful possibilities of a few years from now, when airships will be the recognized mode of traffic and electricity do the work of many individuals.

The entire production of "Dream City" is carried intact as produced during its all season run in New York city, with all the original scenery, stage effects, and elaborate costumes, making it one of the most showy and attractive traveling organizations on tour this season.

MME. OLGA BURGTORF.

(New York Review, March 8, 1904.)

Mme. Olga Burgtorf holds a unique position in the musical circles of New York, having selected as her specialty the folk songs of all nations.

That she meets with great success, is quite natural as nobody has heretofore undertaken to acquaint us with the music of unknown lands.

Almost everybody knows the sympathetic German folk songs, the sad melodies of Sweden and the droll songs of France, but nobody has heretofore thought it worth while to make a study of cannibal, Persian, Indian, Chinese, Japanese and the African negro music.

This effort is certainly praiseworthy, not so much because we may expect unknown pearls of melody, but because these songs have a big educational value.

Mme. Burgtorf has eminent ability for this special line of work, and she has also great love for her chosen field; she wears the costume of the countries represented and sings the songs in the original language.

Her talent for languages is simply astounding, as she is mistress enough of the following languages to be able to sing in them: Cannibal, Hawaiian, Persian, Chinese, Japanese, Polish, Russian, Bohemian, Hungarian, Scandinavian, German, Tyrolean, French, Spanish, Italian, Scotch, English, Irish and Indian. This is certainly an achievement upon which many professors could look with envy.

Mme. Burgtorf possesses a most sympathetic voice, which has been carefully cultivated, and her specialty is a valuable innovation for the concert stage. She will sing in this city at Perkins hall, April 13, under auspices of Colorado Springs Musical club.

Song recital in costume. Typical Folk Songs of various nations. Mme. Olga Burgtorf, Perkins hall, Monday evening, April 13. Following is the program:

PART I.

Mme. Burgtorf, wearing the costume of a Persian lady of high rank, will preface the program with an introductory explanation of the origin and history of Folk Music—as far as can be traced—and will sing the Folk Songs, in the original tongue, in the following order; pointing out the most characteristic traits of the music of each country represented:

American Indian, Mexican Indian, Australian Cannibal War Song, Australian Cannibal Evening Song, Hawaiian Native, Persian Lullaby, Japanese Song, Chinese Song. Intermission, During which, Mme. Burgtorf will change her costume, wearing an Alsatian for Part 2.

TALE OF A CRAB.

From the Chicago News.

Here is rather a startling tale of a huge crab told in the delicate language of a Japanese newspaper: "In the harbor of Shimidzu a great haul of fish is daily experienced since the return of the new year to the delight of the fishermen. Some of the eager buyers sail off to purchase fish before the fishermen's junks arrive from seaward. Among these competitive purchasers was one one named Kato, who sailed out by himself in a small boat. As he was steering his way onward, he espied at a distance some dark object.

"As it showed the upper half of its bulk above the water, he was convinced that it was a crab of [illegible] size. The man sailed toward the shore with all his might and main. The crab, however, appeared to be bent on a fight with the man, and swam after the boat with incredible rapidity. The huge crustacean soon overtook the boat, and, putting one of its bony arms over the side, threatened to overturn it.

"After a long and fierce battle, the crab was vanquished and captured. Kato brought it ashore and showed it to all his astonished friends. Its arms were over 12 feet in length, and the size of its shell is about five feet in diameter. Its weight is 30 [illegible] (110 pounds)."

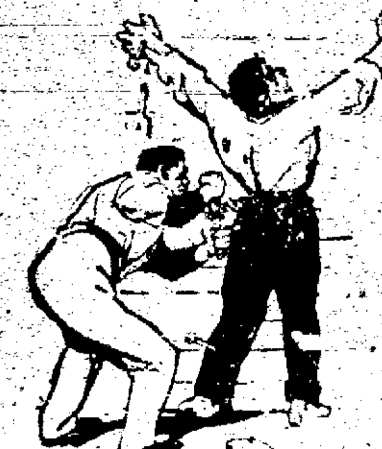

Truss Torture

Once Thought Necessary for the Ruptured, but Is Now Done Away With by a Simple, Natural Invention.

Wonderful Appliance Retains and Cures Without Knife, Danger or Pain in Manner Entirely New and Peculiar to Itself.

Sent on Trial

Truss torture is no longer necessary. Galling, slipping trusses and barbarous methods of treating rupture are done away with by the wonderful invention of a man who has spent thirty years to make it absolutely perfect. The marvelous new Brooks appliance gives to the ruptured instant relief, rest and security, where all others fail. It stops all irritation and restores every part to its natural position as soon as it is used and for all time afterwards. Truss torture ceases and trusses are thrown away forever.

Where others fail is where I have my greatest success—C. E. BROOKS.

Brooks' appliance cures safe absolutely without operation pain or danger. Its price is so low [illegible] than the cost of many hurtful trusses that any one rich or poor, can have the immediate and truly wonderful relief of this marvelous appliance, and no one with rupture can for a single day afford not to have it.

Multitudes of cured men, women and children testify to its astonishing success and lasting cures. Mr. James Britton, a wealthy man [illegible] receives the praise and profit of thousands. He says, "It would be [illegible] send to [illegible] who suffer from rupture if all could procure the Brooks Rupture Appliance. My rupture is all healed up and nothing ever did it but [illegible] appliance."

Where others fail is where I have my greatest success. No springs, pads, salves, ointments, or harness of any kind, nothing complicated, no pain or irritation, but just a simple, natural appliance which cures.

Immediate relief guaranteed. No fakes or lies, just straight business and money refunded if not entirely satisfactory. Ask Brooks for full information. Do not lay this aside, or delay, or forget, but write today for Brooks' Book. It tells all about Brooks' marvelous new Appliance, gives prices and names of people cured. Address at once, C. E. Brooks, [illegible] Brooks Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

FITCH'S FIFTY PLAYS

COMPLETE LIST COMPILED FOR FIRST TIME.

None of the Entire Lot Bears Evidence of Ever Becoming Immortal.

Clyde Fitch has written fifty plays. "Girls," his latest effort, makes the fiftieth. All of the plays have been produced, with more or less success. Yet out of the fifty plays, there is not one which will live beyond the present generation at the most. Already are his first plays forgotten, and the only ones that linger in the memories of playgoers are those which have attached to them the name of some famous player, such as "Beau Brummell," with which Mansfield's name will forever be linked. "Sapho," another effort of Fitch's, is on the boards today simply because of the artistic work done by Miss Nethersole in that role.

"The Climbers" is occasionally heard from, and is perhaps the best of all of Fitch's productions. "The Girl With the Green Eyes" still is remembered because of Clara Bloodgood's work in the title role. "The Truth," one of his best plays, which has failed principally because of the weak last two acts; "The Woman in the Case" and "The Straight Road," both made known by Blanche Walsh, are fast dying out. Neither does "Toodles," one of his later efforts, promise to become famous. "Girls" is too new to know about, but "Her Sister," in which Ethel Barrymore is starring this season, is said to be the limit.

Maxine Elliott brought to light "Her Own Way" and "Her Great Match," both of which have fallen to stock companies. "The Girl Who Has Everything," another Fitch product which was seen here a few months ago played by that charming comedienne, Isabel Irving, did not startle anyone with its greatness. So it is through the whole list. And yet there is not one of the whole fifty which do not bear evidences of being from the pen of a man who has the ability to produce something worth while, but is content with half successes, and big royalties.

Here is the full list of Fitch plays, now compiled for the first time, and in the language of the circus exploiter, "Fifty—count 'em—fifty."

"Beau Brummell."
"Betty's Finish."
"Frederic Lemaitre."
"A Modern Match."
"Pamela's Prodigy."
"The Masked Ball."
"The Harvest."
"A Shattered Idol."
"The Social Swim."
"Mrs. Grundy, Jr."
"His Grace de Grammont."
"April Weather."
"The Toast of the Town."
"Gossip."
"Bohemia."
"A Superfluous Husband."
"Nathan Hale."
"The Moth and the Flame."
"The Head of the Family."
"The Cowboy and the Lady."
"Barbara Frietchie."
"Sapho."
"The Climbers."
"Captain Jinks of the Horse Marines."
"Lover's Lane."
"The Last of the Dandies."
"The Way of the World."
"The Girl and the Judge."
"The Marriage Game."
"The Stubbornness of Geraldine."
"The Girl With the Green Eyes."
"The Frisky Mrs. Johnson."
"The Bird in the Cage."
"Algy."
"Her Own Way."
"Glad of It."
"Major Andre."
"The Coronet of a Duchess."
"Granny."
"Cousin Billy."
"The Woman in the Case."
"Wolfville."
"Toodles."
"The Truth."
"The Straight Road."
"Her Sister."
"Her Great Match."
"The Girl Who Has Everything."
"The House of Mirth."
"Girls."

Most of these plays were entirely original, but perhaps ten of them have been adapted from the French. "Gossip" and "A Superfluous Husband" were written in collaboration with Leo Ditrichstein. "The Toast of the Town," which Jane Kennark played here a couple of seasons ago, was first produced by Modjeska under the title of "Mistress Betty." and "A Modern Match" was first called "Marriage." "Her Sister" was written in conjunction with Gordon Lennox of London. This makes the number of plays actually produced fifty. Mr. Fitch has also the manuscripts of three or four earlier plays that have never been produced, and probably never will be produced.

NOT AFTER STEWART'S BODY

From the New York American.

For the second time within three years the residents of Garden City, L. I., were called out Thursday night by the ringing of the chimes in the cathedral, and Adam Ffiegan, the verger, was brought from Hempstead to see if ghouls were robbing the tomb of A. T. Stewart, which is below the church.

After the stealing of the merchant's body years ago from the church in Manhattan, it was placed below the cathedral here, and the tomb connected with the chimes, so that if the vault was disturbed the bells would ring.

When they rang Thursday night a crowd of men, women and children, some of them armed, marched to the cathedral. Verger Ffiegan went to the Stewart vault, but everything was in order.

At this point two men came from the belfry. They were electricians and had been working on the chimes to have them ready for Easter morning. Two wires had become short circuited, and had set off the chimes.

The idea of condensing milk to make it keep better occurred first to a French chemist named Appert, in 1827. Seven years later the method of evaporating the milk in rarefied air to prevent it from reaching the boiling point, was first used. Commercially, the process was first exploited in the United States, where there are at present about 50 factories which dispose of 200,000,000 pounds of condensed milk a year, valued at [illegible] $13,500,000.

CANCER

IS CURABLE

E. RUSSELL, [illegible]
"The Cancer on My Face Is Well."

A THING WORTH KNOWING.

No need of cutting off a woman's breast or a man's cheek or nose in a vain attempt to cure cancer. No use of applying burning plasters to the flesh and torturing those already weak from suffering.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

There is no disease that afflicts the human family so malignant or so loathsome and so much to be dreaded as cancer, and unless cured always proves fatal. I have been afflicted for the last three years with a cancer on the side of my nose. I had heard of and wrote to Dr. Bye of Kansas City, describing my case. He answered by saying he could cure it in one month. I ordered the treatment and applied it myself at home under his directions, and in about thirty days the cancer came out and is now nicely healing. I suffered no pain. The remedy was Combination oils. I was changed from a nervous and despondent man of 69 years old to a happy and thankful one. No ordinary physician can cure cancer. It requires the services of an extraordinary specialist, and Dr. Bye of Kansas City, Mo., is that specialist whose practice in the treatment of cancer and all malignant diseases has built up for him a wide reputation and an exclusive practice.

I would say to any one afflicted with cancer to give it his immediate attention before it is too late. I would even go so far as to say to the poor man to sell his only cow and send for the treatment, for he had better lose the cow than his life. I write these few lines unsolicited and strictly in the interest of the afflicted.

Any letter or letters addressed to me will be carefully examined and answered by inclosing a stamp for return postage and will give the names of one or two business men who knew me before and after I was cured.—Address me: R. F. D., No. 3, Box 32, St. Joseph, Mo.

IN THE GREAT SOUTH.

An Englishman's View of Dixie and Its Prevailing Traits.

From the New York Sun.

It was after dark when we entered the crescent-shaped bend of the Mississippi which has given New Orleans her nickname. The city stretches out along one side of it, with a ground plan suggestive of a disjointed fan. The water front was meagerly lit and had a blank, inhospitable appearance, though a flare in the sky told of profuse illuminations farther back. To tell the truth, you will never get a good impression of New Orleans from the river, either after dark or before. In the daytime little is visible beyond the long protective works but a dull desert of roofs, from which a few steeples and skyscrapers emerge without adorning it.

The city owes everything to the Father of Rivers, but he is a harsh, intrusive creditor, with whom she does not wish her intercourse to be too close. So far as her front is concerned, she imitates some of her inhabitants, whose street windows are always closely shuttered, while they enjoy themselves in open interiors, pleasant with trees and flowers. And on the other hand, when you have gone a dozen yards ashore, the river disappears as if for good. It never forms the background of a prospect from the streets; there are no pleasure promenades on its banks. You might forget that it was anywhere near unless your curiosity should happen to be aroused some fine day by a mysterious moisture darkening the ground. Then you would learn from a native with what freedom the river percolates all through the alluvial deposit on which this terraqueous city—the Venice of America—stands, or I ought perhaps to say floats.

We had to be warped in broadside to the bank, for by order of the Mississippi, New Orleans has no piers or projecting docks. The river is narrower here than a 1,000 miles higher up—not more than 800 yards across—and the vastly increased volume with which it nears the gulf has to accommodate itself by moving faster and deeper. We were said to be in 100 feet of water when we came abreast of our landing.

The ancient and the modern greatness of New Orleans are separated by one of the broadest thoroughfares in the country—Canal street—which runs at right angles to the water front and was formerly a bayou protecting one flank of the original city. Now it is the chief resort for business and pleasure of the whole community. The so-called American town opens off one side of it and the so-called French town off the other. It is a tangible expression of what is surely the most remarkable combination in the modern world of the Latin and Anglo-Saxon stocks. Nowhere else, with the exception of the province of Quebec, has this particular racial juxtaposition occurred in such a definite form and on so large and permanent a scale. In the province of Quebec it is still a juxtaposition, and nothing more. The French of Canada have not been Anglo-Saxonized, nor have their British fellow citizens become in the smallest degree Latinized. But in this respect New Orleans has no resemblance to Montreal or Quebec. Its French population has been for more pliable, of course. It is rapidly giving up its language and has long—probably ever since the ruse of Mme. Delicieuse—ceased to claim any separate identity in local or other politics. It has only one daily paper of its own, and its rising generation is often unable even to understand the belle language of their ancestors. In the city at least French will practically be a dead language within the first quarter of this century.

The Canadian French have made no such concessions, but the Southerners have surely gained a sound compensation in kind for meeting their neighbors half way. In Montreal or Quebec the two stocks stand apart; neither has assimilated nor enriched the other. But in New Orleans there has been a mutual influence. The French element has not been so largely assimilated without exerting a reciprocal action. One body can not absorb another without being modified by it. And may not this French reaction be traced perhaps far beyond the limits of New Orleans, so that something of a Latin origin should be assigned to not a few widely distributed nuances which are vaguely described as "Southern?" However that may be, it is certain that the Latinity of New Orleans is not by any means confined to the "old city." On the original neutral ground of Canal street a New Englander would more likely be reminded of Marseilles than of Boston. And today the neutral ground is everywhere. In the "society notes" of the daily papers you will find French and Anglo-Saxon names brought together in every line.

The Latin spirit which animates the carnival and the antecedent masquerades belongs to the whole community. The loges of the French opera are a common meeting ground. Bereaved persons of Anglo-Saxon descent prolong their mourning after the French fashion. An open garden can not be found. The privacy of the Latin home has spread through every quarter of the city. An old resident who came originally from Philadelphia told me that superficially at least the social influence of New Orleans on citizens from outside was "enormous;" that he had repeatedly observed the manner and deportment of a northerner losing abruptness and stiffness and gaining suavity and expressiveness within a year or two of his arrival. He added that the change was quite necessary to success in the community. In short, though the French element will soon have lost any separate existence it will by no means have passed away.

THE BEST CURE FOR COLIC IN HORSES.

Colic is usually the result of indigestion, caused by sudden changes of feed, too long fasting, food given when the horse is exhausted, new hay or grain, or large quantities of green feed.

"Every horse owner should keep Sloan's Sure Colic Cure in his stable as an insurance against colic, for an attack of colic is liable to come on without warning at any time, and Sloan's Sure Colic Cure is the safest and best remedy to use. It acts instantly on the stomach and bowels and can be given by a woman or a child.

"I cured a horse with colic that had been treated by a good veterinary surgeon for forty-eight hours," writes Mr. R. A. Pierce, [illegible] Springs, Ga. "The horse was about dead and the owner said he would not take five cents for him. I gave him three doses of Sloan's Sure Colic Cure and he was up and eating hay in ten minutes."

GAMECOCKS ARE HEARD FROM

Small, but They Made Plenty of Noise and When Six O'Clock Came the Policemen Were Unfit for Duty.

From the New York Globe.

A negro dressed like a banjo-player in a vaudeville house, and two white men with mysterious bundles hurried west in One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street in Harlem last night, brushing past Sergeant Trainor. Believing that a negro dressed in such a garb should not be loose on the streets, the policeman stopped him, whereupon the two white men dropped their bundles and ran.

Trainor picked the packages up, and with the negro started for the East One Hundred and Thirty-sixth Street station. There the prisoner gave his name as Hendrick Hudson, and said his address was "up state." He admitted that he was taking the two white men to Englewood, New Jersey.

Just as the negro had been booked, a loud crow came from one of the bundles which had been dropped on the station house floor.

"Cock-a-doodle-doo!" cried the other bundle.

"Them bundles is alive," explained the [illegible] who opened one.

Out stepped a brilliantly hued little game rooster, who blinked and stretched his wings and crowed again. The proper answer came from the other bundle, out of which, in due course, stepped another chicken of the same kind and weight.

"Them is bantam roosters," said the negro.

"I guess we must have interfered with a cock main at Englewood," said Trainor, who was "wise."

Some time later, after the roosters and the negro had been locked up as "suspicious persons," a white man appeared and made inquiry about the fowls.

"Who are you?" asked the sergeant.

"I am a humanitarian," replied the newcomer, "and hearing that the roosters were here, I wanted to see that no harm came to them."

But Trainor identified him as one of the white men who had escaped, and he joined the "suspicious persons" in a cell.

The evening wore on. It was about midnight, and Harlem was growing still.

"Cock-a-doodle-doo, how are you?" replied the other.

His "pal" replied in a voice which indicated that he didn't like his new home, and the conversation continued along these lines. In fact, there was so much conversation the doorman awoke, the lieutenant straightened up, and one of the reserves sneaked down stairs in his stocking feet, and the roosters were moved out to a big room which held a half-dozen prisoners.

That didn't stop the roosters' conversation, however. In five minutes all the prisoners were awake and were demanding vigorously that the roosters be taken from the place. The doorman, fearing trouble, bade the black man, Hendrick Hudson, come out and comfort the two chickens. So "Hendrick" [illegible] soothed them with a soft crowing lullaby, and the two fighting citizens of New Jersey dropped off to sleep. But he couldn't hold the birds all night, so they were put back in separate cells again.

No sooner, however, had sleep folded her wings above the station house once more than the roosters began to talk again. The whole station house was again aroused. Sleep had become impossible. Time was flying along to daylight, and not a reserve had found more than 40 winks. There was no use trying to sleep if the roosters wouldn't.

"We might put them in one cell and let them fight it out," suggested the doorman hopefully. He went back to examine the roosters and returned.

"But they haven't got any spurs on," said he.

"Without spurs they wouldn't kill each other, so it would be no use to let them fight," said a patrolman.

When 6 o'clock came, the roosters and everyone else about the place were as wide awake as they had been at 6 o'clock in the evening. The men were unfit for duty.

"This is all to be blamed on Sergeant Trainor," said the lieutenant. "Why in Hoboken did he want to arrest two roosters?"

Why the Cyclist Smiles

Have you noticed that more wheels were kept in commission during the past winter than has been the case in years? And have you observed, also, that more new bicycles are already on the streets than are usually seen this early in the spring? Well, if you have, it will not be hard for you to understand why the headline above this article is particularly pat.

Occasional hard times are necessary to teach us a few needed lessons in economy, and as the bicycle offers not only a saving, but several ways of gaining, its returning popularity is easily understood.

Of course, the biggest item, or the one that seems largest to the man or woman who uses the street cars daily, is the fact that the bicycle checks the steady drain of silver from his pockets to the traction company's treasury. That's a larger item, taking it by the year, as one must, than is usually realized. When the street cars are used four times a day, as is the case with many workers, it figures out about equal to a couple of months' house rent each year for the average man; an item that certainly is worth considering.

What a Bicycle Saves.

But for nine men out of ten, especially for those who have home duties to attend to nights and mornings, the saving of valuable time that a bicycle offers is really worth more to the wheelmen than the transportation he saves. It easily amounts to an hour a day, and any man can work out that sum at his own rate of pay.

A mighty good illustration of what this all totals up, went the rounds of the papers recently, showing the actual figures of one bicycle owner, in his account with his wheel.

The bicycle was a good one, and cost $50. The repair bill for three years was only $12.50. Taking 300 working days as a year, the saving in three years at 20 cents a day was $180. The credit for the time saved, which in this man's case was worth 25 cents an hour, amounted to $225. And then at the end of the three years the wheel was sold for $23.

A moment's use of pencil and paper will show that the net saving made was $365.50, or to put it in another fashion, the handy bicycle turned out a 730 per cent investment.

More Than Money Is Gained.

The shrewd reader will at once see that this saving is only the dollars and cents of the transaction. There was a gain in good red blood, improved circulation and better digestion, which cannot be estimated so easily.

Taken all in all, what other possession costing so little money, is able to give such returns in health and economy as the bicycle or the motorcycle? It is not a matter of argument at all. Every rider of a decade ago knows he felt better, slept better and actually was better physically, when he used the wheel daily. And those who have taken up the wheel again, and those who have never stopped riding, understand perfectly well "Why The Cyclist Smiles."

Coincident with the return of the bicycle, the motorcycle has rapidly increased in popularity, though it is hardly fair to either machine to class them together. The motorcycle long ago passed out of the freak class, or rather, it was quickly seen that the new vehicle must be accepted at a high valuation. While at first considered largely as a sporting proposition, its reliability, either for sustained effort or a short burst of speed, together with the absolute independence it confers upon its rider, quickly gave the motorcycle a most enviable reputation.

IN CENTRAL PARK

From the New York Sun.

Work that is reminiscent of the forest and the lumberman may be seen these days in Central park, where men are busy with an ax and saw in cutting down big and little trees. The sound of the ax rings pleasantly in the winter weather in the heart of the city. When a big tree comes down with a crash there is always a group of visitors to watch it.

Then the saw is used and the wood is cut up into suitable lengths. Another gang of men get busy with the stump and dig it and the biggest roots out of the ground. The tree felling has been going on since fall, and a great many trees have already been removed.

"We are thinning out the plantation so as to get a more healthy growth of the trees that remain," explained Samuel Parsons, the landscape architect of the park department. "The trees in the park had been planted too closely together, and as they grew up they interfered with one another's growth. From an artistic point of view it is considered the proper thing to have scattered trees in a city park instead of a dense forest."

SALT AS A CHARM

Potency of Use to Guard Against Evil Spirits Has Lasted Through Many Centuries.

From the Pall Mall Gazette.

"The devil loveth no salt in his meat, for that is a sign of eternity and used by God's command in all sacraments," says Scot in his "Discoverie of Witchcraft;" and, indeed, salt, no less than fire, was from the very beginning of time regarded as a gift from above. Homer calls it divine. The old Teutonic races considered salt springs holy things and worshiped them; Tacitus tells of a long and devastating war waged over the question of lordship over one. Logs were soaked in water from these springs and then set on fire, from which small quantities of salt were produced; but, of course, this was only far inland, since all salt comes originally from the sea. There is plenty of evidence in Holy Writ for ceremonial uses of it; the Mosaic law commands that "Every oblation of thy meat offering shalt thou season with salt; neither shalt thou suffer the salt of the covenant of thy God to be lacking from thy meat offering; with all thine offerings thou shalt offer salt" (Leviticus, ii, 13); and Ezekiel in bitter reproach cries to Jerusalem that "As for thy nativity, in the day thou wast born . . . thou wast not washed in water to supple thee; thou wast not salted at all, nor swaddled at all (xvi, 4)." Salt was, in fact, put into a child's mouth in baptism and a pinch of it is thrown into holy water to keep the evil spirit at bay.

Symbol of Immortality.

Some reason lies at the root of all this; salt cannot corrupt, and has therefore always been regarded as a symbol of immortality. In Ireland a pewter plate of it was placed on the heart of a corpse till burial, and then with coals and holy water thrown into the grave. The superstitions connected with it are legion; but perhaps the best known is to the effect that it is unlucky to spill it. Some have found an origin for this in Leonardo da Vinci's famous "Last Supper," at Milan, where an overturned salt cellar is represented by this side of Judas, the traitor; but it is, in fact, a very much more ancient superstition than that. The victims for Roman sacrifices were led to death with salt upon their heads, which, should they shake it off, was regarded as the very worst of omens; and the idea was hoary even then. It is scarcely surprising that a substance in itself regarded as divine should presage disaster to any being careless enough to let it fall; and one can picture stately rits of yore, where salt was carried as a holy relic might be in Italy today, and where, on any accident occurring to it, the most terrible of heavenly revenges might be expected to descend. It is not the first lofty idea the true meaning of which has shed itself in its passage through the ages till now all that remains to us is the mere ignoble superstition. Should any be so unfortunate as to drop or spill salt today he is at once, we are advised, to throw a pinch over his left shoulder three times, saying, "Go to the devil!" each time.

In Wales before any furniture is taken into a new house it [illegible] was till recently—the custom to throw salt in at the door; and when a child for the first time leaves its mother's house, salt is put in its pockets. In both cases, the stuff, of course, representing a charm to keep away [illegible]. Children shedding their first teeth were instructed to wrap each in a [illegible] of paper with some salt and [illegible] the fire; but the German [illegible] somewhat different ritual [illegible] to take [illegible] into a dark [illegible] and [illegible] whispering the words—

> Mous. I give thee [illegible] bone;
> Give me instead [illegible].

The suggestion of the exchange betokens the thrifty Teutonic mind, and one hopes the mouse used all due influence to fulfill his share of the contract to the confusion of all dentists.

Salt was, of course, an indispensable ingredient of all charms against witchcraft. The Scotch goodwife would [illegible] [illegible] in the fire o' nights and [illegible] [illegible]," and many a legend was based on the story of the unwilling guest at some witches' sabbath, who, trying to make the best of the unholy repast, asked for salt to season his meat. At the bare mention of the word, with wild screams the whole assembly melted into air, even as if the sign of the cross had been made or holy water poured into their midst. And not only in [illegible] [illegible] salt be [illegible]; it played its part in love charms, [illegible], and in Henderson's "Folk Lore" we have a recipe for the use of maidens who would call their erring lovers back to them. They must, we read, for three consecutive Friday nights throw a pinch of salt into the fire, and chant the words:

> It is not this salt I wish to burn,
> It is my lover's heart to turn,
> That he may neither rest nor happy be
> Until he comes and speaks to me.

Apropos of the witches' banquet, it would really seem as if England were anxious to emulate the followers of the Prince of Darkness, for, strangely enough, this is the only country in the world where food is so ill-seasoned that raw salt is almost a necessity to make any dish palatable. Any other hostess but an English woman would regard it as a reflection upon her cook [illegible] ness her guests helping themselves to salt afresh with every course; [illegible] might as well be expected to [illegible] own mayonnaise, and naturally it is good for no human being to swallow quantities of raw salt unless of necessity, as, for instance, in eating nuts. Even the Chinese, whom we are apt to look down upon as lacking in progress, can give us hints here. Miss Katherine Carl, the American lady commissioned a year or two ago to paint the portrait of the Dowager Empress of China, records that a little dish of "very salty sauce" was placed beside each plate at meals, as the powdered mineral itself was considered far too coarse to add after-cooking. A very early Victorian traveler, Sir Alexander Burnes, whose "Travels in Bokhara" caused much interest some 70 years ago, but are now almost forgotten, makes mention of a salt mine he visited in Persia, the workers in which suffered miserably from colds in the head throughout their lives and all died young from softening of the brain; all of which they [illegible] at[illegible] to the [illegible] of [illegible] salt they were thus forced to inhale. If some English people tortured with constant catarrh were to try properly seasoned food and abjure mineral dust for a while they would be pleasantly amazed at the result, and it is, after all, an easy and a pleasant enough cure, once the cook can be brought to contribute to it. "A place for everything and everything in its place" is no bad motto for the culinary art as for other walks of life.

In the alphabet of charm there is no such letter as I. Every one is you.

HOW THAT BRUTE BECAME PRINCE

One day "that brute" followed the Van Ness children home at Two Bridges, N. J. Certainly "that brute" has no pride of ancestry; he is yellow, and when viewed at different angles and in different lights it is hard to tell whether greyhound, mastiff, bulldog or dachshund predominate in his hybrid blood.

"Throw that brute out!" said Farmer Van Ness when the children brought him home. "He's a mutt; he's no good."

Thus the big, ungainly dog got his name; Jessie Van Ness, 3 years old, lisps it "that boot," which is equally the diminutive for "beauty."

"That brute" hung around the house, keeping a sharp lookout for Papa Van Ness and feeling, tail between legs, whenever he saw him. The dog's existence would have been most precarious had not the older Van Ness children pocketed part of their lunches and dinners, and finding "that brute" somewhere on the territory he appropriated along the Passaic river, fed him, while he nearly jumped out of his saffron skin in grateful happiness.

The children have a swing on a tree on the river's bank. Willie, 10 years old, was swinging small Jessie yesterday. "That brute" lay in the shade, [illegible] contentedly, for was he not near his good friends? When the swing was at the highest of its arc Jessie lost hold of the ropes, and with a frightened little scream, was shot far out into the river.

Like a yellow streak "that brute" ran, jumped after her, and when she arose seized her clothes in his jaws and kept her afloat. Willie's frightened shrieks for help brought his mother and a farm hand. They got there just in time to see "that brute" lay Jessie, safe, sound, dripping, on the river's bank.

Jessie was all right in an hour. Last night "that brute" lay very much at his ease in the Van Ness dining room. Now and then Papa Van Ness patted the dog's head and said:

"Prince, old boy, as soon as you think you can eat some more just say so, will you?"—The Modern World.

ALL THERE BUT THE TAIL.

From [illegible].

Dressed in the latest and most approved motor cycling costume, with goggles all complete, the motorcyclist gayly toot-tooted his way by Regent Park toward the Zoo. Suddenly he slackened, dismounted and said to a small, grubby urchin:

"I say, my boy, am I right for the Zoo?"

The boy gasped at so strange a sight and thought it must be some new animal for the gardens.

"You may be all right if they have a spare cage," he said, when he could find his tongue, "but you'd ha' stood a far better chance if you'd 'ad a tail."

WITH AN EASTER OFFERING

By Marion C. Smith

Once more the long imprisoned streams
'Twixt softly greening borders flow,
And April's touch has waked from dreams
The little children of the snow.
'Rootlet and bulb and tiny seed,
Close kept through days of storm and strife,
Now, from their winter's bondage freed,
Push upward to unfolding life,
In hints of hope, on every side.
In glistening bud and glancing wing
Is borne the word of Eastertide,
"Your dead shall rise, your souls shall sing!"

The royal lilies, fair and wise,
Still dreaming of the Master's face,
Come from their warm, sweet paradise,
Where never wind or storm has place.
"Consider us," they seem to say,
"As once our sisters of the field.
We rise in glory from our clay.
So shall your graves their treasures yield."

On shrine and bower their scent is rife;
Their whiteness sets the world a-gleam.
Oh, sign of deathless love and life,
What heart is steeled against your dream?

Dear Easter Lady, tall and fair,
I bring you lilies, half unfurled.
The voice of love is on the air;
The light of spring is in the world!
For you no hint of gloom or death,
For you no winter in the year
You only know the lilies' breath,
The robins' note, the morning's cheer.
Take you my song of Easter day,
Fresh from the lilies' paradise,
And, since you bear my heart away,
Oh, let it with your heart arise!
Whate'er the shadowy future brings,
Today we know this hope is ours
The spirit of uncounted springs,
The blossoming of immortal flowers!

WHERE THE EASTER LILY IS GROWN FOR PROFIT

WHERE do the Easter lilies grow? Chiefly in the Bermudas, those delightful "summer isles" 500 miles off the Atlantic coast. Acres and acres of lilies, whole fields of them are cultivated in those beautiful islands, where it is always summer and for the most part "always afternoon," like the lotus land of Tennyson. There are about 400 of these islands, though many of them are too small or too barren for human habitation. On several of the larger ones, particularly the King isle of the group, which is named Bermuda, Easter lilies are grown for the markets in big continental countries far away. The United States, by reason of proximity, is Bermuda's chief market, and the shipment this year is the largest ever known. Bermuda lilies by the million are shipped to New York and other American ports, whence they are distributed throughout the forty-six states and the territories.

In view of the symbolical significance of the lily, it is peculiarly appropriate that the flower should grow to its greatest perfection in Bermuda, a little land washed by waves which never know a war. While the larger islands in the general vicinity, such as Cuba and San Domingo, have shaken for centuries under the from best of war the Bermudas have reposed in perpetual peace. While great armies in the old world and the new have wrought havoc from century to century and powerful navies have grappled upon the seven seas, these little spots of summerland have been exempt from carnage and spoliation.

Yet it was three and a half centuries after the discovery of Bermuda and more than two centuries after the islands were colonized by the British crown that the Easter lily found a home there. It is a singular fact that for many years the Bermudas were called the Isles of the Devils. A Spanish mariner named Bermudez discovered the group while on a voyage from Spain to Cuba some time between the years 1515 and 1522. Observing that the vegetation was luxuriant and food for animals apparently plentiful, Bermudez shrewdly conceived the idea of leaving some hogs on the larger islands with a view to having them increase and multiply for future needs of navigators. But it seems that nature had a more profitable use for Bermuda than that of hog colonization, for when an attempt was made to land the swine in a boat a fierce storm arose and the hogs were carried off to Cuba. From these storms the Spaniards were prompted to name the place [illegible] Bermudas.

When Captain May, an Englishman, was shipwrecked with his crew in 1593 and landed on the southern shores of the Bermudas as the result of another storm, the islands were still uninhabited. May and his men lived there for five months. Finally they built a boat of the native cedar and escaped to Cape Breton, whence they sailed to England and announced their discovery of the neglected group. Sixteen years later Sir George Somers and other Englishmen made a rediscovery of the islands. Sir George and his companions in 1609 were driven by a storm into the midst of the group, and their vessel was wedged between rocks. They reached the shore and took possession in the name of England. The next year one of the adventurers published in London a little book detailing this experience and describing the islands. It is held in some quarters that William Shakespeare read a copy of this book and used the storm incident as a background for his play, "The Tempest."

ON A BERMUDA LILY FARM.

A Penal Colony.

But Bermuda had yet to look into civilization's lovely, serene face before the coming of the Easter lily. For a considerable period England used the islands as a penal colony. When the [illegible] prisoner that Sir George Somers [illegible] had described as the richest, healthiest and most delightful isles that had been seen at any time, some of the former convicts elected to remain in Bermuda. Their descendants still occupy the islands along with the descendants of negro slaves imported from Africa, Indians imported from America and English and colonial Americans who settled there and succeeded in establishing a permanent colony. The "tailored" natives who now do most of the field work in growing lilies are a mixture of American Indian and African negro.

The unfortunate hog having failed to gain a foothold in Bermuda, the plebeian onion succeeded to this favorable opportunity. Onions were grown in the islands as a staple industry for generations. The people planted onions in the fields as we plant corn, making the industry quite profitable.

But nature had made the Bermudas a jewel, with its linked sweetness long drawn out through the charming chain of islets. In 1573 the two prosaic onion growers [illegible] opportunity which inherited the Bermudas by right of poetic license. A man named Harris arrived in the islands and found the atmosphere and the soil and the sunshine peculiarly adapted to the cultivation of lilies at any season of the year. He imported bulbs from Japan, to which country they had been conveyed from China at early date. The experiment of Mr. Harris was a success. The Lilium harrisii, otherwise the Bermuda lily, is the blossom which adorns and sanctifies thousands of American churches and homes on Easter Sunday.

The Resurrection Flower.

Many of the Bermuda lilies seen in the United States are shipped here as bulbs and are brought to blossom in greenhouses. This Easter, which symbolizes the resurrection, has for its peculiar flower one whose petals lie closed in the darkness of the bulb until brought forth for the sacred purpose and occasion to which it is dedicated. Many lilies in the bud are shipped to New York and other parts in time to arrive just before Easter. These are cut with a long stem, wrapped carefully in tissue paper and kept moist. Skillful florists cause the buds to open in glorious bloom by placing the stems in water of the proper temperature. It would be impossible, of course, to preserve the full blown lily cut from its stalk for shipment.

By far the greater number of our Bermuda lilies which we use at Easter time arrive in the United States in bulb form the summer before. August is said to be the most favorable month for shipping the bulbs, which are taken in hand by expert floriculturists and coaxed into blossom when required.

There are in Bermuda more than 200 farms devoted exclusively to lily growing. April is perhaps the best month in which to enjoy the splendor of a lily field in full bloom. Some of the farmers enhance the beauty of the sight by growing a border of red lilies around the field of white flowers. The red blossoms are popular with the natives, but are not imported to any considerable extent into the United States. The country road in Bermuda between fields of the pure white flowers, growing in such profusion that the ground is not visible. The air is permeated with the delicate aroma. It is a singular fact that many Bermudans object strongly to the fragrance of the blossoms, even preferring the odor of the onion, which is still cultivated to some extent, though onions are not so profitable acre for acre as are the lilies. A recent American visitor reports a native Bermudan as saying:

"You can discern the fragrance of a lily field a mile off. I don't know of any perfume I dislike so much as that of the lily, and you will find that many other persons born in Bermuda feel the same way. You see, unless you live here the year round, with that heavy perfume permeating the air, it is impossible to realize how tired you become of it. The fragrance of a bunch of lilies delicately scenting a room or a church is decidedly different from the overpowering fragrance exhaled by a field of blossoms thirty or forty acres in extent."

Most Valuable Crop.

Nevertheless, since an acre of lilies produces a crop three or four times as valuable as the same acre would produce if planted in onions, potatoes or fruits the natives are quite reconciled to the heavy perfume of the lily fields. In the growing of lily bulbs for export great care is exercised. It requires about three years to produce a bulb of the size and quality demanded by the American markets. Usually the bulbs are collected in June and July and are packed in dry sand to keep them from starting to grow prematurely. In Hamilton, the chief town of Bermuda, the wharf presents a lively scene when lily farmers are preparing to ship a cargo of their precious product. The cut buds are shipped [illegible] during the year. Extreme care is necessary in order to preserve the white outer surface of the bud from cracks or bruises. In addition to the wrapping of tissue paper, the buds are packed in layers of damp moss or ferns. They are placed in boxes with cold storage accommodations to prevent them from blossoming on the voyage or afterward until such time as the florist wishes to dispose of the flowers. The work of packing must be done not earlier than a day before the steamer sails. As a rule, natives of a climate such as that of Bermuda are slow going and procrastinating, but when a shipment of lily buds is to be made there is real hustling for one day at least. From seventy to eighty buds as a rule are packed in each box. The shipper guarantees that at least fifty buds shall reach the buyer in prime condition. When the boxes of buds arrive in port they are shipped by the lily growers without an hour's delay to the customers, orders usually having been taken in advance. With each box are printed directions for coaxing the buds into full bloom in time for the occasion when they are to serve their purpose.

PACKING THE LILIES FOR SHIPMENT.

The Lily Legends.

Some of the legendary lore of the lily is thus set forth by a recent writer:

"The lily seems to have inspired a sentimental regard wherever the flower has taken root and by the Egyptians was considered symbolical of immortality and pure affection. It was also regarded sacred to Juno and is now looked upon as the special flower sacred to Mary, the mother of Christ. In the language of flowers it is considered emblematic of immortality, because, which seemingly dead the bulb still possesses the power to bloom again.

"Majesty, purity and sweetness are also attributed to this flower, and many pretty legends connect it with the dawn of the first Easter morning. It was esteemed as typifying humanity saved and redeemed by Christ. When dawn broke in the east on the third day after the crucifixion an absolute stillness pervaded the earth, so the legend runs, and moved by unseen hands, the stone that had been [illegible] before the sepulcher of the Lord Jesus was rolled slowly aside as the first rays of the rising sun fell upon the tomb. From its dark recess the risen Christ stepped forth, and as his feet, marked by the nail prints, touched the ground an Easter lily burst into bloom on the sod he had touched. As he stepped forward away from the tomb Easter lilies sprang up wherever his touch or glance had rested, covering the [illegible] with them, and [illegible] the risen Lord."

A MONK WAS HE

Copyright

By LILLY A. LONG

THERE was a sound of revelry by night from the Calvert cottage. A dozen neighboring cottagers had come in for the impromptu masquerade with which young Mrs. Calvert and her lively sister, Betty Bellamy, were entertaining some week-end visitors from town. When the available people in a neighborhood are limited in number and their faces are familiar to the point of weariness, masks and costumes are a great help toward restoring the element of The Unknowable, which is, after all, the chief interest in human intercourse.

Mrs. Calvert, who had not masked, though she had transformed herself into a demure shepherdess by an improvised crook, shortened skirts and a wide hat with fluttering strings, hovered on the outskirts of the laughing crowd and kept an eye on the shadowy path under the trees that led up from the station. Edward was late, inexcusably late for a host, though fortunately his guests couldn't be sure he was not among them. She was beginning to hold down hysterical visions of horrible accidents, when her anxious eye caught sight of a hand beckoning imperiously through a crack of the kitchen door. With a sudden lifting of spirits, she slipped out and threw herself into the arms that were attached to the imperious hands.

"Edward! Whatever kept you? I had to let them begin dancing without you."

"That's all right. I waited for the [illegible] so as to bring Richards out with me—the man who used to do for me in my bachelor days, you know. We simply had to have somebody, and the so-called intelligence offices have nearly reduced me to gibbering idiocy. Not a girl of them has any use for the simple life. Richards will stay for a few days and lend an air of worldly prosperity to the cottage while our friends are here."

"Oh, darling, aren't you clever!"

"W—ell," he hesitated, with ostentatious modesty.

"Where is he?"

"Upstairs. I smuggled him in the back way, so that no one would suspect his transient character. He is to hang around and wait for orders."

"Well, hurry now and dress, dearest, and come in as soon as possible."

"That's what I called you out for. I can't find my costume."

"Edward! What did you do with it?"

"I don't know. I brought it out from town yesterday in my suit case, but I can't for the life of me remember what I did with the suit case."

"Isn't it in your room?"

"No. I took my things out of my room when I put Harker in it. Haven't you seen it about the house?"

"No. Everything is upset. What was your costume, dear?"

"Oh, aren't you cunning? And wouldn't you like to know?"

Nell Calvert laughed a rippling little laugh of sheer pleasure. She had had no thought of catching him, but it was nice of him to think her clever enough to do it, and clever of him to refuse to be caught. Then her responsibilities as hostess recalled her to the lesser subtleties.

"Oh, I know what you can do, dearest. Put on this monk's gown. Betty hung it here for any emergency," she said.

"That's a new name for Harry Van Voorhis. Hasn't he come, then?"

"No. He sent word that he had been detained in town. Let me help you. Oh, Edward I'd never know you in the world!"

"My own costume was much handsomer," said Edward, regretfully, as he girded himself with the hempen cord, "but I suppose a monk should lay aside worldly pride and personal vanity. It's better than nothing. Run on in and I'll slip around and come in by the front door."

But Nell's responsibilities as a hostess had fluttered away into the starry night. She was regarding Edward with a wistful look.

"I'm glad you are not truly a monk," she said, lingeringly.

"So am I. I couldn't have married you if I had been. How does this hood go?"

"And you aren't sorry you married me, are you, dearest?"

"Goosie! Does this thing tie in front or at the side?"

"I suppose I am. But sometimes I wake up in the night and wonder if Judge Griffin was right when he said that you had ruined your career by marrying me. I should hate to think that I, of all the world, was responsible for ruining your career."

"And you don't think I was going to all the bother of hunting up some one else to marry, just to save you from a little unwelcome responsibility?"

"Oh, Edward! But if I were only clever —"

Edward knew the tone. He drew the little shepherdess very close to the monk's gown.

"I don't want you to be clever—I mean, cleverer. And aren't you unreasonable to expect Uncle Griffin, who is nothing but an unfortunate old bachelor, to know anything about the effects of marrying the sweetest girl in the world? How could he? It's out of his jurisdiction. Now you just wait twenty years and then ask me what I think on the subject. Meantime, if I might suggest that you are making me act absurdly out of character, and that our guests—"

"Oh, you darling!" Her rapturous hug made the monk's gown crinkle with astonishment.

But when she had gone, Edward Calvert stood silent a minute, absentmindedly tugging at his belt. Of course he did not for a moment regret that he had thrown down the gauntlet to fate and Uncle Griffin by marrying on nothing a year but hope, and still — Of course, there might be something in Uncle Griffin's theory that a young lawyer should make the law his mistress, and still— If some didn't happen pretty soon in the way of business —

[illegible] thoughts [illegible] by the noiseless entrance of [illegible] the old factotum of his [illegible] who appeared with an [illegible] a suit case. [illegible] he asked with [illegible]

"It might, it may, it can, it must," cried Calvert, throwing the monk's gown off joyously, and extracting from the bag a cavalier's long cloak of crimson velvet, with a plumed hat to match. "This is more to the point. A man can't afford to waste one of his few opportunities to make himself beautiful. Where did you find it?"

"Atop the ice box on the back porch, sir," said Richards, sedately.

Calvert laughed queerly. "Love in a cottage," he said, under his breath. "We are a trifle crowded."

"I hear that Mrs. Calvert is quite the beauty," remarked Richards, conversationally.

"Oh, you haven't seen her yet, have you? Hang that gown—behind the door, I mean. I'm going in."

Richards held the door open, and Calvert slipped in and joined what looked like a dress-rehearsal of theatrical costumes with no plot. In his interest, the man lingered longer than was necessary, and so attracted the attention of a court lady with high-puffed powdered hair, and a brocaded gown of much splendor. She came out quickly, closing the door behind her.

"Did you want anything?" she asked. Her manner was quick and imperious, and Richards wondered uneasily whether a mere bow would be sufficiently ceremonious for so great a lady.

"I'm Richards, ma'am. Mr. Calvert brought me out to help out for a few days. He said some one would tell me when anything was wanted, so I was just waiting."

"Oh, yes." There was a quick relief in the impatient voice. "Can you make claret lemonade? You'll find the things all here in the buttery. Fill this large bowl, and set it, with the glasses, and that plate of little cakes, on the table at this end of the side porch. I'm thankful you're here, goodness knows. I was just going to see to it myself." She hesitated a moment (an unusual weakness for Betty Bellamy), and then turned back, with her hand on the door.

"If Mr. Van Voorhis should come—oh, you don't know Mr. Van Voorhis, do you?"

"No, ma'am."

"Well, if a gentleman should come—he'll walk over from the station after the nine o'clock comes in—tell him he was expected—no, don't tell him that. Tell him he wasn't expected, but that Mrs. Calvert left a fancy dress here for him to wear, if he should happen to come. It's a monk's gown hanging just inside the buttery door there. You understand?"

"Yes, ma'am."

"Be sure to say Mrs. Calvert left it," the court lady insisted.

"Yes, Mrs. Calvert," said Richards, glad to have his guess as to her identity so unquestionably established.

"The nine o'clock just went by. He's tall and—er—rather good looking. Oh, you can't mistake him. There's no one else like him." There was a curious quaver in Betty's voice. She heard it herself, and was so surprised that she stopped a moment to consider it and then fled without further speech.

Richards, left to himself, began to squeeze lemons and to take amused note of the campers' makeshifts in the kitchen. The cottage was completely surrounded by screened porches, which gave a fictitious air of spaciousness to the place. He was meditating on the curious mental bias which could lead people who might have lived in a snug little flat all summer to choose such a draughty habitation instead, when there was a step outside and a man (tall and unquestionably good-looking), tapped at the door and then cast a surprised look about as he stepped in.

"I must have approached the wrong end of the house in the dark," he said, with some formality. "This is Mr. Calvert's cottage, is it not?"

"Yes, sir."

"Will your take my card—er—what's that?"

A sudden burst of laughter clashed within, and gay voices rose above it like sparkling rockets above a splashing fountain of Chinese fire.

"There's a party here," said the newcomer, fixing Richards with a sternly accusing eye.

"Yes, sir," said Richards, suddenly remembering his commission. "You're expected, sir. Mrs. Calvert left this for you to wear." He took down the monk's gown.

"Extremely thoughtful of Mrs. Calvert," said the stranger dryly, but making no motion to accept the extended robe. "I'd like to know if this sort of thing is going on much of the time."

The screen door was flung suddenly open, and a fairy in fluttering red gauze, chuckling with laughter, darted across the room and out at the opposite side, to be followed by a baggy but agile clown.

"What in Sam Hill!" ejaculated the stranger, with a sudden lapse from his formality. "Who are those people?"

"I couldn't say, sir. I've only just come out for the party."

"Extraordinary. Most extraordinary." The tall stranger stared out through the open door as though he expected the apparition to reappear. "So this is what Ned has come to," he muttered to himself. "I knew how it would be. He is doomed. No mortal man could maintain his professional ambitions in such an atmosphere. If anything were needed to justify the position I felt constrained to take regarding his marriage—"

"Mrs. Calvert said would you go right in, sir," improvised Richards, still holding the gown on his extended arm, and glancing at his unsqueezed lemons.

"I will," said the stranger, with sudden determination. "Help me on with that crazy thing on. I will go in." And in that inner chamber of the brain which was closed to Richard's hearing he was saying to himself: "It will be an excellent opportunity to study that girl in a state of nature. I shall see her as she really is, without any deceptive gloss—put on for my special benefit. No one can say I am not disposed to be fair. Like the Caliph Harun al Rashid, I will adopt a disguise and learn the truth. I'll learn more in five minutes than in a week of formal visiting, when she would be on her guard. It's a fortunate chance I came tonight."

The gown was an ample one, and [illegible] vidual about the wearer except his height.

"Now, how do I get in?"

"Better come around to the front, sir," said Richards, leading the way across the patch of clover which inclosed the cottage. He opened the screen door of a large front porch, and the monk stepped in and looked about. Japanese lanterns, gay hammocks, ferns in hanging baskets and a quantity of rugs gave this temporarily deserted spot an air of languorous luxury, and under his mask the monk frowned.

"Hist! One moment," he whispered to the retreating Richards. "Can you tell me which is Mrs. Calvert?"

"The one with the high hair—coming this way," Richards answered, and withdrew.

It was not until the court lady, who had marked his entrance, came out and swept him a magnificent courtesy that a sudden qualm of fear struck the intrepid monk. "Good heavens, my voice!" he said to himself.

"Good evening, holy father. Do you give absolution for sins?" she asked saucily.

"I give penance, daughter," he answered with a severity that was perceptible even in his husky whisper.

"What the matter with your voice?" asked Betty, with quick concern in her own.

"I'm trying to disguise it, of course. What is a masquerade for?" demanded the monk, with a betrayal of unspiritual irritability.

Betty laughed, stared at him, and laughed again.

"JUDGE GRIFFIN, FOR ALL THE WORLD!" EXCLAIMED MRS. FLETCHER.

"Oh, of course," she said. Evidently Harry had taken the statement that Mrs. Calvert had thoughtfully remembered his costume to imply that she, Betty, knew nothing about it.

"You are a monk, aren't you? I may safely guess as far as that?"

"I'm a Trappist. That means I can't talk except when it is absolutely necessary."

Betty laughed again. She had a pretty, frank laugh, and the monk began to take a relish in his adventure and to admire his own cleverness in retort.

"Very well, I'll do the talking. Isn't it a nice party?"

"You do the talking?"

"Oh, yes. Well, it is a nice party. And fun. It's curious how much more you find out about people when you don't know who they are than you do when you do."

"That was my idea, exactly."

"Our everyday faces are masks and the reputations our friends give us are masks, and behind them our real selves may be as different—as you are from what you seem to be. That's why our own families are always making such blunders about us."

"Do you think so?" asked the monk with interest. He was recalling instances wherein his immediate friends and relatives had shown themselves incomprehensibly blind to his real merits, when the lady's next words startled him.

"Do you know anything about Edward's uncle, Judge Griffin?"

"More or less," he said guardedly.

"Well, he is an instance in point. He brought Edward up, and yet he understood him so little that he thought Ed would give up the girl he loved if he was told to, and he was so angry at Ed's obstinacy in marrying against his wishes that he has never spoken to any of us since, as though that were not the best example of obstinacy."

"What nonsense!" said the monk, with husky energy.

"Of course it was nonsense. He is a dry-as-dust old lawyer, and he wanted Ed to be his partner in the dry-as-dust-ness as well as in the law, and never go off to playhouse with a little girl. And, what's worse, he particularly disapproved of the particular little girl Ed chose." She laughed again in the light-hearted way he had thought rather pleasant a few minutes before. "He said Ed married into a frivolous family."

"Well, didn't he?" demanded the monk. For the life of him he couldn't help it.

"He says we are extravagant!"

"And aren't you?"

"Haven't a chance to be under present conditions. And he thinks we—flirt."

"Well—don't you?"

"And altogether he thinks we are not fitted for poor men's wives."

"Well, are you? Candidly now, are you?"

The court lady laughed. She had taken off her mask and was fanning her flushed face with it. It was an attractive face with a dancing eye and a resolute little chin.

"I'm not sure I could give myself the sort of an indorsement that Judge Griffin would demand," she said demurely. "I like, better to laugh than to weep when I'm in a fix, so maybe I'm frivolous. And I like to talk to intelligent men—he would probably think I was flirting this minute! And if he knew we were having a party, and really dancing and drinking the festive lemonade, he would probably feel that his worst apprehensions were realized. It's lucky he doesn't know."

"I dare say there are many things he doesn't know," remarked the monk gloomily.

"That's true," said Betty cheerfully. "We ought to remember that in extenuation. He probably doesn't realize at all that he is a very selfish and obstinate old man."

The monk gurgled inarticulately.

"No one would ever tell him that to his face," continued Betty. "People don't, you know."

"Not generally."

"I have often thought I should just like to have an opportunity to tell him what I think of him. Ed is having an awfully hard time. You see the judge had promised to take him into partnership when he graduated, and Ed counted on it. Then he broke his promise, just because Ed would break his. Don't you think it was horrid and mean of him?"

"It sounds bad when you put it that way," said the monk stiffly, "but—"

"That's the way it was. Wasn't it mean?"

"If you have settled it, why ask me?"

"Wasn't it?"

"Incredibly. Meanest thing I ever heard of."

"Oh, it's such a satisfaction to hear you say it! After that I can admit that he may in some ways be a good man and a worthy member of society."

"Really? Isn't that going pretty far?"

"No, really, he might be," she said with pretty earnestness. "I hope I am not so bigoted as to think a man has no good qualities because in one special case he acts like a spoiled child."

The monk was tensely silent.

"It is just possible that he suspects by this time that he took a foolish stand in that matter," she went on. "Ed is married and can't be unmarried, and really, you know, we are not a bad sort—especially in a gloomy climate. I don't know what would have become of poor Ed these rainy days if my sister and I had not been just naturally frivolous. Frivolity is the best antidote I know of for Judge Griffinism." She laughed, with the easy, friendly little laugh that one might think pleasant under some conditions, and rose. "Now you really must go in and dance."

"I don't believe I—care to."

"You're afraid," she teased. "Scared of being found out! That's why your remarks have been such inconspicuous digressions from a brilliant silence—I know! Come, stick it out! You must play the game, now you're in."

"Well—but I won't talk. Talking is dangerous for a Trappist."

"The Trappist trapped," she mocked adjusting her mask, and leading the way into the large room, where a fairy in red at the piano was rattling off some music with a lilt in it that was reminiscent of the dancing school he had gone to as a boy. In listening to it, he forgot that he had intended to seize the first opportunity to escape. The court lady tossed him, as it were, to a dainty little shepherdess, and before he knew it he found himself walking through the lanciers. The excitement of discovering that he really hadn't forgotten how it went agreeably put other reflections out of his mind for the moment. When the shepherdess responded to his nervous clutch with a tender little pressure, he suddenly began to realize that there was something to be said after all in favor of a reasonable amount of social relaxation. What had that girl—confound a sharp woman!—said about frivolity being an effective antidote for Griffinism?

Meantime Richards had been again interrupted in his task. A young man who seemed perfectly acquainted with the geography of the house had slipped into the kitchen without tapping.

"Are you in charge out here?" he asked hurriedly. "I want to leave my hat and bag here, then. They're dancing, aren't they? You needn't say anything to anyone. I know my way."

He enveloped himself in a long black domino which he extracted from his bag, and then walked coolly into the larger room and mingled with the maskers. His interest seemed to be specific rather than general, for he made his way through the rooms, peering into the faces with the licensed privilege of a domino, but apparently unsatisfied in his search until he espied the court lady and the monk tete-a-tete under the Japanese lanterns. He took up his station at a commanding point of view, and his attitude unequivocally suggested that there rested upon his hidden face a jealous scowl. Here Nell found him.

"Good evening, Mr. Van Voorhis," she said teasingly.

He bowed. "How did you know?"

"How did you know that was Betty?"

"There is no mistaking her methods of enthrallment when you have once been a victim. Who is the monk?"

"Oh, that's Edward. You can't be jealous of him. Won't you come with me and have some punch?"

Van Voorhis bowed and offered his arm.

"I didn't think that Edward was so tall," he said with a backward glance.

Nell laughed with amused tolerance for a lover's jealousies. "Oh, there's no mistake about its being Edward. I helped dress him up."

The cavalier in crimson velvet, who had been standing near enough to catch the last words, swept her a profound bow as she brushed past, and then chortled to himself with glee.

"I've taken Nellie in completely," he said to himself. "What larks! Who's that domino with her? Seems to me he's an extra."

"Beg pardon, sir," said Richards, at his elbow. "Telegram. Boy just brought it over from the station."

Edward withdrew to a quiet corner of the porch, and tore the envelope open. Telegrams have a reputation as disturbers of the peace, and this was not one to spoil the record. Edward read—

"Will run down to spend the night with you. Will arrive on the 9 o'clock train. Henry Griffin."

"Tonight!" he gasped, his brain paralyzed for the moment. "Why, he mustn't come. Not tonight. Heavens! Got a blank there, Richards?"

"Yes, sir."

Edward wrote hastily. "Don't come till Monday." Then he hesitated, looking wildly about for a euphonious excuse. "I can't say there's scarlet fever in the house. It wouldn't be strictly true. I could say Mrs. Fletcher is in the house, but then he would never come. 'Will arrive.' Come to think of it, he can't arrive tonight. There's no train out after this. He must mean tomorrow night. He examined the message more collectedly, and then turned sharply to Richards.

"When did this come?"

"Just now, sir."

"It has been delayed, then. That lazy station agent waited for someone to happen along. But the 9 o'clock train has gone by, and no one came."

"Yes, sir," Richards corrected him deferentially. "The last gentleman came then, sir."

"He came, and you didn't tell me? What have you done with him? Good heavens, man, where have you put him?"

"He went in, sir. He's dancing now."

Calvert stared as though Richards had suddenly betrayed signs of insanity.

"Dancing! You're dreaming. You're thinking of Mr. Van Voorhis."

"No, sir. He came first, Mr. Van Voorhis did, and he put on that gown that Mrs. Calvert left for him—the one you took off sir —."

"Yes, yes —."

"And then this other strange gent came, and he brought a gown of his own, that black one dancing over yonder, sir."

Edward freed himself from his cloak and mask and walked nervously up and down the deserted porch.

"Let me think, let me think. He's that extra in the domino. He's been talking to Nell. Heaven knows what she has been saying. He has been drawing her out—cross-examining her in that sardonic way of his that forces a witness into lies he never dreamed of." His indignation at this thought calmed him, and after a moment's reflection he said more collectedly. "Step inside, will you, and ask Mr. Van Voorhis to come out here a moment. I'd like to speak to him."

Richards went. Edward stood silent, looking out to where the moonlight sifted through the trees and made silvery arabesques on the clover-covered lawn, but he saw nothing of what his gaze included. He was only conscious of the fact that the one man in the world whom he would have wished to satisfy, even to the point of unreason, had gone beyond the point of unreason in his hostility. The faint hope of reconciliation which he had not been able to renounce in spite of unkind speech and unkinder silence snapped suddenly, and he felt himself free—very chillily alone, but free. He gave a quick laugh and turned with the gayety of the defeated to greet the monk, whom Richards at that moment brought out.

"Harry, Judge Griffin is here. He's that black domino. I didn't know until a moment ago. You know the judge was not pleased about my marriage. He is apt to take bitter and unreasonable prejudices."

The monk had at first made a hesitating effort to free himself from his mask, but at this his hand dropped, and he nodded in acquiescence, as he leaned negligently against a pillar of the porch.

"Of course, I should have been glad to be friends with him—I'm fond of the old fellow in spite of his pigheadedness but after this—well, I guess we'll get along apart. But what I wanted to say to you is this: Mrs. Fletcher is here—came with the Plummers. She's an inveterate gossip, in the first place, and she and the Judge haven't spoken for years, because of some old bitterness. If you could manage to keep them from coming together—I don't like to seem to wantonly defy the Judge's susceptibilities, but she has been civil to Nell, and that means a good deal to me just now. My own family, as represented by the Judge, has distinctly not been civil, and I'm doing my best to keep the dear girl from taking notice. Of course, when it's a question between my uncle and my wife, the Judge can go to thunder."

The monk nodded again, and grunted an inarticulate assent in his throat.

"I just thought I'd tell you, so you could help out if you should see a chance. I think I'll go and hunt up some old law reports I piled away in the woodshed and scatter them around the cottage. The judge believes in my being studious, you know." He laughed with unbecoming mirth as he hurried away.

The monk stood silent, watching the moonlight sift between the trees and trace silvery arabarques upon the clover-covered lawn, but he was not considering the beauties of nature.

"This Harum al Rashid business is not what I have been led to suppose," he muttered uncomfortably. "It is all very well when they heap blessings on the name of the Caliph, but— Confound them, I meant to be nice to them—if I found they deserved it. But I never suspected they could harbor such sentiments. Ned was positively disrespectful. And that strong-minded girl! A pretty figure I should cut trying to patronize her. I don't care if she is right—in a measure. I hate a woman who is right when you are—well—the opposing counsel."

At that moment the little shepherdess with whom he had danced the lancers came out on the porch. She saw the monk standing by himself in the shadowy corner and to his amazement she came up swiftly and threw a pair of warm arms about his neck.

"Darling, darling!" she cried, with [illegible]. Instinctively and unconsciously he tried to free himself.

"Don't, for goodness sake," he gasped in a smothered whisper.

But the little shepherdess only laughed and tried to draw his tall head down to her.

"No one will see us," she cried, bravely, and somehow her warm lips found a spot between his mask and his hood whereon they pressed a tingling star. Then, after another soft hug and a teasing laugh, she fled as she had come.

"My land!" murmured the monk, in a daze. He stood perfectly still for a moment, so as not to blur the sensation. "Well, well! I suppose that was merely—a kiss. And I suppose some people are used to it. I never knew it was like—I wonder who she is. And whom did she take me for? Harry van Voorhis, I suppose. Lucky, lucky, Harry!"

He slipped further back into the shadows.

"I've got to go, and go quick. That's evident. I don't care to meet Ned's wife, after those embarrassing confidences she may be right, but it's unfeminine for a woman to insist on being right. And I wouldn't for the world embarrass that sweet little girl who k—kissed me. She thought it was Harry, confound him. She'll find out it wasn't when they unmask, but she'll never know who the mysterious monk was. I'll just make a mysterious disappearance, if I can find my hat!"

He let himself out by the wire-screen door, and tried to remember just how he had come around the cottage from the kitchen, when he was arrested by two eager voices at an open window.

"But I saw her with my own eyes!"

"She threw her arms about his neck and kissed him—oh, there wasn't any mistake about it."

In the darkness and under his mask the monk felt himself tingling. He had a curious sense of elation, like a boy who has seen the circus, come now what may. But the next words startled him.

"Good heavens! And they've only been married a few months. Poor Mr. Calvert."

"You know his uncle was bitterly opposed to the marriage. Evidently with reason."

"Are you sure there wasn't any mistake?"

"Oh, not the slightest. Mrs. Calvert hasn't been masked all evening, you know, and every one recognized Mr. Van Voorhis in the monk. Don't mention it to a soul."

"Oh, of course not."

And they hurried away, eager to find new confidants.

"That is Mrs. Fletcher," said Judge Griffin, grimly. "I know that thin voice of hers. She'll spread the story over town by tomorrow noon. So that was Ned's wife! Who the mischief is the other girl? Oh, I remember there is a sister of course. So that is Ned's wife! Soft little thing! She wouldn't ever argue with a man. I don't believe she would have an opinion to her name. She's too sweet. Ned had more sense that I gave him credit for."

Through the open window the first strains of a waltz came out to him. He saw the little shepherdess pass the window, and his heart gave a curious leap. He saw two women with their heads together, and he felt sure that one of them was Mrs. Fletcher. At that sight his lips settled into grim lines. "The little thing shan't suffer because of that kiss," he said, firmly. "I'll be hanged if I let her. If she hasn't a right to kiss her uncle —"

He went up the steps he had just descended, and reconnoitered through the open door. The fluttering fairy in red was at the piano, pounding out a tune with a triple beat. The little shepherdess was standing alone near the wall. He went up to her swiftly.

"I want you to come to dance a few steps with me," he said, and before she could exclaim in protest he had slipped his arm about her and swung her into the waltz.

He danced with an old-fashioned hopping step that threatened to shake down Nell's hair, and he whirled her around and around till she was dizzy past speech, but his guiding arm was strong and his agility past question. Then she was aware that he was talking to her under cover of the dance.

"I am Ned's uncle, Henry Griffin," his voice said, close to her ear. "I want you to know before we unmask, mustn't be surprised. You must say quite calmly, if any one speaks about it, that you knew who I was—that I had told you beforehand. I am Ned's uncle—your uncle, too, my dear. You understand? You are sure you do? Now I am going to surprise the others, but you mustn't be surprised. You just laugh at them with me. Remember."

The music stopped. Edward, unmasked and nervously anxious, was intent upon the black domino, who stood haughtily aloof with folded arms. The court lady had given him no opportunity all evening, and his attitude expressed the state of his ruffled feelings. Then the monk clapped his hands.

"Our hostess wishes us all to unmask now," he said in a ringing voice, and he himself was first of all to lift his mask and throw back his hood. If the unveiling brought other surprises, they were lost as the stars are lost in the moonlight.

"Uncle Henry!" cried the bewildered Edward.

"Judge Griffin for all the world," exclaimed Mrs. Fletcher, thinking so rapidly that her face looked puckered.

The court lady had dropped upon the nearest chair, and was staring at the monk with such amaze and horror that the black domino seemed to find a shred of comfort. He was obliged of necessity to abandon his haughty air as he crowded behind chairs to make his way around to her.

"And what of all your sweethearts?" asked the old-time chum at length.

"Gone the way of all good things!" answered the captivator.

"That tall, lanky blonde with the fierce mustache, for instance?"

"Went insane!"

"Gracious! And Jimmie Bowles—the 'little muskrat' as you used to call him, who was so devoted?"

"Killed in an auto accident trying to save my life."

"Dear me! And your needy artist-swain, who found in you the only customer for his wonderful paintings?"

"Became a waiter, and married an heiress!"

"Well, well! And the Englishman—St. Clair, who stood so well on his feet, never said anything but yes and no and despised everything American?"

"Married a Brooklyn girl, and now living at Swamphurst, N. J."

"And the kinky-haired little French count?"

"Ran away with my maid!"

"Worse and worse! And how about Reggie? You used to profess to love him, you know?"

THE TWO MYSTERIES

We know not what it is, dear, this sleep so deep and still;
The folded hands, the awful calm, the cheek so pale and chill;
The lids that will not lift again, though we may call and call;
The strange white solitude of peace that settles over all.

We know not what it means, dear, this desolate heart-pain;
This dread to take our daily way, and walk in it again;
We know not to what other sphere the loved who leave us go,
Nor why we're left to wonder still, nor why we do not know.

But this we know: Our loved and dead, if they should come this day—
Should come and ask us, "What is life?" not one of us could say.
Life is a mystery, as deep as ever death can be,
Yet oh, how dear it is to us, this life we live and see!

Then might they say—these vanished ones—and blessed is the thought,
"So death is sweet to us, beloved! though we may show you naught;
We may not to the quick reveal the mystery of death—
Ye cannot tell us, if ye would, the mystery of breath."

The child who enters life comes not with knowledge or intent,
So those who enter death must go as little children sent.
Nothing is known. But I believe that God is overhead;
And as life is to the living, so death is to the dead.

THE DREAM FOOD FROM GREECE.

Hashish, that strange drug which has given our language its word "assassin"—a man so frenzied by the drug that he accomplishes a murder—is used by the Persians, Turks and Egyptians in a manner akin to the use of opium by the Chinese. It is the product of a plant grown in large quantities in the Peloponnesus (Southern Greece) in the district about Tripolitza. The plant grows to a height of about four feet and its branches are thickly covered with small leaves and studded with tiny seeds.

The entire plant, stalk and branches, is cut within a few inches of the root and laid out in the sun to dry. The branches are then rubbed to separate the seeds, and these in turn are ground into a fine powder, which constitutes the drug. This drug has the power of inducing sleep and producing pleasant and fantastic dreams. Continued use of hashish renders its devotees wild and reckless and results its devotees wild and of their mental and physical constitution.

For this reason the Egyptian government has prohibited the importation of the drug, and recently entered into a convention with Greece to prevent its exportation from there to Egypt, where the consumers of hashish are very numerous. The drug is practically never used in Greece, but it is now exported to the various ports in England, Austria, France and Italy, and [illegible] there, no doubt, ultimately finds its way to Egypt.

SWOLLEN FORTUNES IN AMERICA

Official List of Fifty Multimillionaires Prepared by New York Banker Who Is Nephew of Commodore Vanderbilt.

By FREDERICK C. CRAWFORD

SENATOR JEFF DAVIS, of Arkansas, recently made the assertion that 50 people owned 35 per cent of the total wealth of the United States. This is probably an exaggerated statement.

The estimated total wealth of the United States is placed at $116,000,000,000. Thirty-five per cent of that amount would be $40,000,000,000. The 50 persons mentioned by Senator Davis, therefore, would have to be worth $812,000,000 each to sustain his assertion, according to the best information obtainable, as well as the popular impression. John D. Rockefeller is about the only citizen of this country who could even approximately qualify for a place in the Davis group of 50.

However, accurate information concerning the wealth of the multimillionaires of the United States is not easy to get, for the simple reason that the aforesaid multimillionaires are, as a rule, very secretive on this subject. Many of them, it is said, do not know definitely how much they are worth; but those who do know, do not take the public into their confidence regarding the matter for obvious reasons. The tax assessors would immediately proceed to get busy if the multimillionaires would hand out official figures about their respective wealth.

Figures from the Inside.

An estimate of the wealth of 50 of America's leading multimillionaires recently made for private circulation in the financial district in New York, by E. L. Crawford, a prominent banker of that city, has more than an ordinary value for the reason that its author is the nephew of the late Commodore Vanderbilt (the founder of the Vanderbilt fortunes) and a member of the multimillionaire class himself. His table is, in a sense, semiofficial, as it is an estimate of the wealth of a group of multimillionaires by an insider, or one of their own number.

Mr. Crawford's estimate is said to be ultra conservative: that his figures could be raised from 20 to 30 per cent without going outside the bounds of truth. But, as they stand, they may be regarded as sufficiently startling. Fifty-two persons, according to this table, own $4,095,000,000 worth of property, or nearly 4 per cent of the total estimated wealth of the United States.

The per capita wealth of the eighty-odd millions of inhabitants of the United States is estimated to be $1,310.11. The wealth per capita of the 52 persons in this group is $78,750,000.

Summarized briefly, these 52 capitalists have wealth equal to 4 per cent of the total wealth of the United States, 8 per cent of the total wealth of England, 10 per cent of the valuation each of France and Germany, about 14 per cent of the wealth of Russia, and over 25 per cent of the wealth of the Austro-Hungarian empire; over 40 per cent of the estimated valuation of Italy, about 80 per cent of Belgium's wealth, and 90 per cent, roughly speaking, of the wealth of Spain and the Netherlands. Portugal and Switzerland lumped together only exceed in their resources by a small margin the [illegible] as will be seen from the following table of the estimated wealth of nations:

The Wealth of Nations.

United States	$116,000,000,000
England	62,200,000,000
France	42,800,000,000
Germany	42,000,000,000
Russia	35,000,000,000
Austria-Hungary	20,000,000,000
Italy	13,000,000,000
Belgium	6,800,000,000
Spain	5,400,000,000
Netherlands	5,000,000,000
Portugal	2,500,000,000
Switzerland	2,400,000,000

In 1905 the total capital invested in industrial enterprises of all kinds in the United States was estimated to be $12,686,265,673, or only a little more than three times as much as the combined wealth of the 52 men mentioned.

In 1896 the farm animals' value in the United States, including cattle, horses, sheep, mules, and swine, was put down at $3,673,389,442. These 52 men could acquire all of the livestock on the farms of the United States and still have a comfortable balance of nearly half a billion dollars for other investments.

Assuming that their capital of $4,095,000,000 brings in a return of 5 per cent, their combined annual income is over $200,000,000, or about 40 per cent of Uncle Sam's net yearly revenue from all sources.

These men could club together and pay off the public debt without batting an eye, as the saying goes, or suffering any serious financial inconvenience. They would not be compelled by so doing to change their mode of living or economize in any of their personal expenses. The $23,000,000 interest which Uncle Sam pays out every year would only make a very slight dent in the income of this group of financiers.

Only three of the 45 states in the union (New York, Massachusetts and Pennsylvania) have a total assessed valuation of over $4,000,000,000, and only 12 states (New York, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, California, Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Ohio, Texas and Wisconsin) have a total assessed valuation of over $1,000,000,000.

The total receipts of the United States from all sources, from the beginning of the government in 1789 to 1907, have been $20,141,734,386. More than one-fifth, or 20 per cent of this sum, is today in the possession of 52 individuals who do not hold any official position of any kind.

Salary of 40,000 Presidents.

An income of $200,000,000 a year represents the combined salary of 40,000 presidents of the United States.

The disbursements for pensions for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1907, were $138,030,894.22, considerably less than $200,000,000.

The pension disbursements for the War of the Revolution are estimated at $70,000,000. J. D. Rockefeller or Andrew Carnegie could disburse that amount from their private resources without calling for outside help.

The total pension disbursements of the United States for all wars and for the regular army and navy establishment [illegible]

595,015,723.69, nearly half a billion less than the estimated wealth of the "52 syndicate."

But the table prepared by the nephew of Commodore Vanderbilt does not include all of the multimillionaires in the United States, by any means. He has overlooked, among others, a man, Frederick Weyerhaeuser, by name, who, many people believe, is almost, if not quite, as rich as John D. Rockefeller, the Standard Oil magnate.

Mr. Weyerhaeuser lives in St. Paul, Minn., and is comparatively unknown outside a very limited circle, for the reason that he has never figured very much in the limelight of publicity. He is the president of the Lumber trust, and probably does not know how much he is worth. He has made his fortune out of lumber, and began many years ago to buy up all the timber land he could get hold of. Today he owns millions upon millions of acres of the finest timber land from one end of the country to the other, which is constantly growing in value as the visible supply of timber diminishes.

Some estimates of Mr. Weyerhaeuser's wealth place it at a cool billion.

tually control property worth the enormous sum of $2,500,000,000, averaging $200,000,000 each.

At 5 per cent interest each one of this group of 14, provided they pooled their fortunes, would be entitled to an annual income of $10,000,000, a little more than $833,000 a month, about $20 tors, in the great majority of cases the millions have been accumulated during the lifetime of the present generation.

John D. Rockefeller, who heads the list with $600,000,000, and is presumably the richest man in the United States, started out in life, poor, with only brains and energy for his capital. His colossal fortune has been acquired through the Standard Oil company, but he was, comparatively speaking, a rich man before he succeeded in organizing the Standard Oil corporation, back in the early seventies. His business ability and financial genius would have brought him to the top in the financial world, his friends declare, if the Standard Oil company had never existed.

Mr. Weyerhaeuser, Mr. Rockefeller's close rival for the distinction of being the richest man in the United States, began the battle of life as a poor boy. Mr. Carnegie, the third richest man in the group, commenced his business career as an humble telegraph operator, at $40 a month. He got his start upward through the favor of Thomas A. Scott, the creator of the Pennsylvania railroad system. The steel business was in its infancy when Mr. Carnegie ficial, coming from a member of the family circle. Commodore Vanderbilt, the founder of the family fortunes, left an estate valued at $80,000,000. His son, William H. Vanderbilt, increased it to $200,000,000, and today the various members of the family control nearly $600,000,000.

The Vanderbilt millions have been over 100 years in the making, yet they do not equal the fortune accumulated by John D. Rockefeller in less than a single generation. One hundred years from now the Rockefeller estate, if it continues to increase as rapidly as it is doing today, would easily be worth a couple of billion of dollars.

J. Pierpont Morgan, who is the commanding figure in the financial world of this country, is only credited with being the possessor of a paltry $150,000,000. This seems rather out of proportion to the position Mr. Morgan occupies in the popular imagination, but the statement is made that Mr. Morgan's $150,000,000 represents real money, and not watered stock or fictitious values. He is the architect of his own fortunes, having commenced at the bottom of the ladder. His millions have been made by "high finance," in the legitimate sense of the term.

Edward H. Harriman and Thomas F. Ryan are quite recent acquisitions to the group of multimillionaires. Mr. Harriman enjoys the distinction of being one of the very few successful New Yorkers who was born in that city. It is a fact that nearly all of the "New Yorkers," who have achieved fame and fortune in the metropolis of the country took the precaution first to be born elsewhere.

Others Are Well Fixed.

The supply of rich men is by no means exhausted, however, in the above lists. Here are a few others who are comfortably well fixed:

Nelson Morris, Chicago	$30,000,000
Michael Cudahy, Omaha	30,000,000
George Swift, Chicago	30,000,000
Thomas F. Walsh, Denver	100,000,000

Great Oaks from Little Acorns Grow

Great Men from Properly Raised Children

Do you want your boy to be a president of the United States a senator or a great capitalist?

Early life influence means everything to the child. You should employ an intelligent, sweet tempered, happy nursemaid. One who delights in her work of caring for your children. A maid that will teach obedience by loving attention. Be sure that your nursemaid has the natural mother instinct.

Such maids advertise for situations, or follow the Help Wanted columns of The Gazette every day.

If you want this kind of a maid, read the want pages in The Gazette today.

What You Get

IT'S AGAINST THE LAW to kill young deer and there ought to be a law to compel young couples to start homes of their own—any other way of living kills sentiment.

Put your outlay in your pocketbook, but get a home of your own even if you rent a furnished flat at first at any price you like—until you see how you like it and how you like the neighborhood. It's CERTAINLY THE ONLY WAY TO LIVE.

You'll find every day—today and especially Sunday in the Classified Columns of The Gazette a list of all the furnished flats and houses in every section—city and suburban—and also splendid bargains in complete household furnishings, selling at a big sacrifice by some one who is going away or has failed or emergency cases.

It's most interesting reading about your home—look now and you'll find how easily you can start and have one and are not worth very much, but they are interesting. They show how much you have spent merely for a place to live in temporarily. Sum them up for a few years, and they amount to a great deal—more than enough to buy the house. Why not, in the future, have this rent apply on the purchase of a home? That's the way we sell our cottages on monthly installments that are only a little larger than the rent of similar houses. Isn't this a splendid opportunity to acquire a home?

We have several other new cottages just completed of 4 and 5 rooms and bath, with and without furnaces, that we will sell for $75 TO $300 DOWN AND $10 TO $25 PER MONTH.

MAN AND HIS HAT.

There are things it is a comfort to know which even a man cannot do and a man is supposed to be able to do almost anything. Now a novelist may put his heroine's hat on her head at any angle he chooses: it is one of the few privileges of womanhood—and leave her not a bit less charming or dignified, but I defy him to put his hero's hat at a rowdy angle over his ear at a crucial point in his career and leave him still a hero! The Achilles heel of a man is his hat! He must guard that as he does his reputation, for it is at once his strength and his weakness.

It would hurt an archbishop—and an archbishop necessarily stands for all that is good and great-less in the eyes of the public to commit a crime than to wear his hat on the back of his sacred head—tout back—and so exhibit himself to his distressed diocese. He may have all the known virtues and many that are not known, but even an archbishop cannot with immunity defy convention. Still if he is so inclined, why should not a good and great man wear his hat over his nose without creating unfavorable comment? The fact is, he cannot. He is ruled by convention, and convention is the red tape of society.

The hat iron-bound fashion, which is only another name for convention, are such that if the greatest man in England were to walk with all his accustomed dignity from the marble arch to the bank with a trailing peacock's feather attached to the band of his immaculate silk hat he would be followed by a mob in two seconds and by the time he reached Vere street the outraged majesty of the law would take him into custody as a suspicious character.—Mrs. John Lane in Putnam's Monthly.

The show which will be held at Memphis, Tenn., April 16 to 18, the local dealers who are promoting it say, will be the first ever held in any of the southern states.

THE AMERICAN NEWSPAPER

As Seen by Henry Watterson in 1873.

From an address by Henry Watterson before the Indiana Press association, May 1, 1873. Reprinted in his volume of essays, "The Compromises of Life."

I am fully persuaded that, take it all in all, the journalism of America is the very best in the world. It is a complete answer to the ancient sneer of the cockneys touching our books, for, in truth, it is beginning largely to constitute our literature.

I do not mean to disparage Longfellow and Whittier and Lowell, Motley and Bancroft; and I hope I shall not be suspected of seeking to steal a titular distinction for our craft at the expense of our greatest humorist, if I declare that the morning paper is the only autocrat of the breakfast table. When I consider the labor and the learning that are devoted to books which will be fortunate if they get eight or ten thousand readers, and observe the increasing audiences which are gathering about the bulletin boards, I mourn in silence, but in sorrow, at the sight of such young men as Bret Harte and Joaquin Miller and Mark Twain throwing themselves away, and I rejoice and am exceedingly glad in the salvation to journalism and the world of a soul so precious as that of John Hay.

Badinage aside, my serious meaning is that every age has its interpreter; there was the age of the drama; there was the age of the pamphlet; there was the age of the novel. This is the age of the newspaper. The journalist is to-day what but a little while ago the novelist was; what a little while before that the dramatist was, the observed of all observers, for he is an exceptional creature, a man, indeed, like his fellow men, but possessed with strange, invisible powers, which affect men's lives, fortunes, and characters; not merely an abstract and brief chronicle of the time, as the player used to be said to be; something more than a myth or an almanac. There will never again be a Dickens or a Dumas.

The romance of yesterday, with its moving incidents and real figures, will engage the interest of vigorous writers as they engage that of the public, and as fictitious situations and conditions are nearly, if not quite, exhausted, actual situations and conditions, brilliantly written out for the daily newspapers, will take the place of imaginary scenes and passions. I am myself, at this moment, diligently seeking for a young Thackeray to sketch society; for a young Cooper, to go upon the frontier and "do the Modocs; for a young "Boz" to take the place of a very inadequate police reporter; and for a young Bulwer to do duty as a general utility man. I make no doubt of finding what I want; and the likelihood is that, when found, they will issue from strange places, just as there is the certainty that they will enter upon a broad, new field with boundless opportunities.

What a "hit" George Alfred Townsend made; then Don Piatt; and along with them McCullagh. Did Thackeray ever do wittier work than Don Piatt? Did ever Dickens write more graphically than George Alfred? Was not McCullagh more quoted, did he not exercise a greater influence on his country by his letters, than any writer of his time? Yet they are but crude examples; they worked in the dark; they worked much against themselves, like the old poets, like Marlowe, Decker, and Otway, who were half ashamed of their calling, and held in disrepute by those who were not fit to tie their shoe strings. I name them to illustrate what may be done by men of genius, who have not a financial stake in the press, and do not own and manage newspapers, getting their fame and their fortune off the brains of obscure, ill paid subordinates.

As Congreve and Sheridan were, as Dickens and Thackeray were, the journalist may be, and partly is, already; a man in whom a public interest, great or less, according to his genius, is taken; a man who, loving his fellow men, has it in his power to help them and to be loved by them.

The process is very simple. To be kindly, honest, fearless, capable, that is all; and I name kindliness first, because if a newspaper would be popular it must, like an individual, carry a pleasant aspect; it must be amiable and unpretentious; speaking the language and wearing the habiliments of the people; bone of their bone and flesh of their flesh, a sincere as well as an effective deliverer of their thoughts, wishes, and fancies. If Shakespeare lived in our time, conceiving him to have been a robust, blithe, and hearty person; conceiving him to have been what we understand by an able person and an able-bodied, and, withal, a more representative, gay and festive person, I take leave to doubt whether he would find the drama the best vehicle for his overflowing wisdom, his exuberant wit, humor, and fancy, his amazing activity; and I wonder that a man of such varied and large resources, of such vigor, current and racy faculties as Dion Boucicault should be comparatively a poor man, wandering about the world and writing plays, when he might be, had he bent himself that way, the editor of the London Times.

NEW SHAKESPEREAN TUMULT

From the New York World.

Suggesting in the World a few years ago a means of retaining the Shakespeare play on the stage, "Play it in a new way," wrote Nym Crinkle, "and have all the critics in your ears for violating the traditions. Which they have now done in London, and truly the critics howl. But the people applaud, and, after all, they buy the tickets. It is "Romeo and Juliet" played as a melodrama, which causes the commotion.

Now a melodrama, by the lexicon, is a drama with a romantic story or plot and sensational situation and incidents. If one wishes to argue the case, remembering a ball room scene, certain street fights, a plotted elopement and a double suicide, to say nothing of a basic family feud, he might ask whether "Romeo and Juliet" does not fulfill amply the demands of this definition. But what is the use? Why add fuel to a fire of debate which has raged vainly for over [illegible] years as to various issues Shakespearean—for instance, as to whether Hamlet was fat or lean?

Bernard Shaw maintains that Shakespeare was a gentleman, and not as some contend [illegible] [illegible]

consciously reincarnated, would be amazed at the fuss and controversy over his works which the world maintains steadfastly. He wrote for a living, not to live in men's quarrels.

Hundreds of volumes have been written to interpret Shakespeare's plays; about 300 others deal with the proposition that Bacon wrote the dramas. The real Juliet, the real Hamlet, the real Othello and Desdemona, have been variously discovered. Sidney Lee, an authority, has argued ably that Caliban of "The Tempest," usually supposed to be a symbolic figure, represents the poet's idea of the North American Indian. There have been discussions of Shakespeare's women, his hump on Richard III, his dialects, his dramatic methods and the names of his dogs. Mansfield and Irving made pageants of his plays, while Ben Greet presents them in undraped simplicity.

What substantial tokens have other disputants to compare with the fond possession of a certain Chicago woman—two hairs that are firmly maintained to have been of Shakespeare's eyebrows?

RICH VEIN IS SOUGHT

SINKING ON ROXANNA PROPERTY TO BEGIN.

Mountain Monarch and North Star Claims Are Leased.—Trial Shipment from Long John Claim.

Special to The Gazette.

CRIPPLE CREEK, April 11.—All of the blocks of the Mountain Monarch and North Star claims belonging to the Roxanna Gold Mining company, which is owned by David H. Moffat, the Denver millionaire banker and railroad promoter, with the exception of one have been leased, and in most instances work has commenced.

The Union Leasing company, which is operating successfully on several different claims in various sections of the camp, have secured a lease on blocks No. 1 and 8, and have started to work in the main shaft, which is located on the Mountain Monarch claim. Messrs. Danford and Burke have a lease on block No. 3 and have begun operations.

This property has been worked by Mr. Moffat for the past couple of years, and without much success. It is located, however, in a most desirable neighborhood, being nearby the Doctor-Jack Pot, Morning Glories, Little Clara and Dolly Varden. It is the opinion of some of those who have secured leases that the celebrated Little Clara flat vein can be cut with depth, and considerable sinking will probably be done.

All of the leases granted are for a period of 18 months and in each instance graded royalties are exacted. Under the leasing system it is expected that some good ore will be opened up within a short time.

Messrs. Moore and Seefey, operating on the Lucky Gus claim of the Stratton estate on Bull hill, shipped out nine cars during the month of March, which gave returns varying from three to 10 ounces in gold to the ton. Practically all of this ore was mined from a small but very rich streak uncovered on the 450-foot level.

It is estimated since this ore streak was found that upwards of $100,000 gross has been shipped, and the indications are that this year this sum will be tripled. Already this month two cars have been shipped and the ore is of the superior grade.

Lessees who recently secured the Long John claim on Ironclad hill, adjoining the Cameron townsite and the property of the Bonanza Contact Gold Mining company, have made a trial shipment from a vein which was uncovered near the surface and which is about two feet wide. This trial lot will likely give returns ranging from $25 to $30 in gold to the ton.

There is considerable work being done in this section, more than for several years past. Already there have been several big veins cut, but so far the values have been of a low grade, but sufficiently high to warrant making shipments under the present low freight and treatment charges.

The Bonanza Contact company has granted several leases and work has been started. Probably the best showing so far made is in the block of ground adjoining the Forest Queen, operated by A. S. Lamberton.

The Forest Queen is shipping between three and four cars of ore a month and all of the ore is being mined from the shoot which was cut some 200 feet east and north of the shaft at a depth of 500 feet. This ore gives average returns of $35 in gold to the ton, and is being broken down from seven to 12 feet in width. Some little development work is being done on other levels but practically all of the ore now shipped is coming from the 500-foot level.

RAWHIDE IS GROWING

FEVERISH HASTE OF OPERATORS IS APPARENT.

Lorena, the New Camp South of Rawhide, Is Attracting Attention.—District Sanitary.

RAWHIDE, Nev., April 11.—The state police are actively engaged in enforcing sanitary regulations throughout the camp, and by the time hot weather makes its advent Rawhide will be as healthy as any town in Nevada. Garbage, which has remained heaped up alongside the roadways and in the alleys and back lots is being removed, and other menaces to the public health are being looked after vigilantly. The new water distributing system will be completed and in operation before the summer months, and this alone will contribute largely toward preserving the health of the community.

Money is becoming a little easier in the camp, but there are still a great many men here seeking employment. As is usually the case with a new camp, adventurous spirits flocked in here by the hundreds and thousands, all looking for a chance to make a fortune in a short time. Many of these first comers were fairly well supplied with funds, and have been able to support themselves and take over some good leases, which they are now developing, but by far the greater number came here on a shoestring, and the string is becoming somewhat frayed. There are probably more than 500 men working on the various properties, including the leasers who are doing their own work, but there are three times that number looking for work that is not to be had. Later, when the various properties in the district have attained a greater degree of development, the mine owners and leasers will be able to work more men, but only a few men can be worked on a property until after depth is attained and underground crosscutting is begun, no matter how rich the ground or how anxious the owners are to rush operations.

NEW MINING DISTRICT

SECTION NEAR KEELER, CAL., OPENED UP.

Is Receiving Attention of Several Large Concerns.—Outcroppings Gold and Well Defined.

KEELER, Cal., April 11.—A new mining district lying about five miles southeast of this place on the Darwin road section is rapidly coming into prominence and gives every promise of soon becoming one of the foremost gold sections in the state. The croppings are generally decomposed quartz with considerable hematite ore. Large streaks of rich ore traverse the formation, values frequently running over $400 a ton. The ledges are about four feet wide near the surface, with increasing size as depth is gained. Several companies are working in the district and developing reserves of good ore. Several shipments have been made to Goldfield with good results.

Shafer, Dickman and Thompson have located 16 claims and are developing several good ledges. They sunk a 25-foot shaft on the main ledge and shipped 15 tons of ore to Goldfield for a test. The milling returns were $82 gold and $5 silver a ton. The hematite had up to this time been thrown aside as worthless, but an experimental test showed values running $70 in gold to the ton. As depth has been gained the ledges show manifest improvement. On another group small stringers of almost solid gold ore have been found. Gold is found in surprising quantities at the surface workings and the ledges wherever developed give an excellent average value. No attempt is being made to boom the district and the outside world knows very little about what is going on. Parties familiar with the district declare that if it were located in Nevada it would have been the scene of a big rush several months ago. Local people are principally interested, although Goldfield people have secured several good locations.

It is reported that the Quartette company will build a narrow-gauge railway line from the Jumbo mine at Hart to Searchlight, which would facilitate the transportation of the ore at a low cost. In the meantime the ore will be transported to mills by teams.

Work on the Schwab and Clark copper properties in the Greenwater district continues steadily. Ore has been encountered in the former at some distance below the old workings, but only in small quantities.

SENSATIONAL STRIKE

SHADY RUN ORE IS REMARKABLY RICH.

New Discovery Equals That Made at Time of Original Find.—Many Men Attracted to Scene.

FALLON, Nev., April 11.—Among sensational reports from the new strike at Shady Run is that made by Leon Hall, about a mile south of the original strike. The assays, it is stated, gave $2,110.24 in gold and $17.49 in silver, a total of $2,127.73 a ton.

Ed Brown and John West came in very much elated over the discoveries and say they have claims close to the main strike. Mr. Brown states that N. C. Sullivan of Fallon has run a tunnel into the hill on his claim right at the townsite of Coarse Gold. He is in solid pay ore the entire length, that is, he has ore above, below and on the right that averages $76 a ton. Frank Smith has claims just above from which one can horn gold almost any place on the surface. Mr. Brown brought in a chunk of rock from the surface on the Hall claim that shows the nuggets sticking out in various places.

Leon Cirac of Stillwater says they have nine claims in the vicinity of the new strike and that they got a $40 assay from a two-foot ledge. This ledge is so located that it would be very easily worked.

Frank Smith is down 30 feet, following the ore vein, and gets pannings of coarse gold as he goes. He expects to let a contract to sink 100 feet.

E. S. Adams returned from a five days' prospecting tour in the new camp and says there are about 100 men in that locality, and he met 50 teams going in as he came out. Mr. Adams was in Goldfield in the early days of that camp and thinks the Coarse Gold country makes a most favorable surface showing. He located 12 claims for himself and Fallon associates, about two miles south of Shady Run. He sent a sack of samples to Salt Lake to be assayed and expects to give the results in a short time. Mr. Adams says the Sullivan ledge will carry right on through other claims.

ACTIVITY NEAR ROLLINSVILLE

Denver Parties will Open Florence Property on Dutchman's Peak on Substantial Plan.

CENTRAL CITY, Colo., April 11.—Denver people are associated with William Spear in the development of the Florence property, and a tunnel has been started on the east side of Little Dutchman's peak, near Rollinsville, for the purpose of opening up the lode with increased depth. The tunnel is now in a distance of 50 feet, and the owners are figuring on putting on several men this spring to push the developments. Some very fair looking mineral has been opened up in the tunnel and some picked pieces of ore have, it is stated, given values of as high as $490 a ton in gold. The tunnel is to be driven in a southerly direction and depth is rapidly gained.

A new air shaft has been made on the west side of the Hall main shaft in Russell district, an upraise being put from the 50-foot level, so as to provide escape from the mine as well as improved ventilation and to conform with the state law. In the meantime some extra fine looking smelting ores are being taken out of the various levels and a carload shipment will be made within a reasonable time. A large tonnage of milling ore is also being piled up for an early shipment. The property is being operated under lease and bond by Hughes and [illegible] wit, and promises to become one of the best shippers in the Russell district.

John Chase and A. S. Petit, of Denver, are the owners of the Smart group, near the head of Gamble gulch, in the Independent district, and they are figuring on the carrying on of liberal developments on their holdings, commencing inside of the next 60 days. The main shaft on the Smart is down 60 feet, and some good quartz has been taken out and shipped to the Dostal mills, giving satisfactory returns.

STOCK TRADING LIGHT

ACTIVE INTEREST NARROWS TO SMALL GROUP.

Securities of Public Utilities Corporations Supplyng New York Receive Attention.

NEW YORK, April 11.—Active interest in stocks today narrowed to the group of securities of the public utilities corporations supplying New York city. The professed reason for the volatile rise in that group was the advantage to accrue to the traction companies by absolution through judicial decision from the obligation to supply transfers between the Third Avenue and the Old Metropolitan Street Railway lines. Consolidated Gas was brought into movement by action on the part of the company to obtain release of the funds tied up in the hands of the court out of the charges in excess of the 80-cent rate, the enforcement of which has been successfully contested in the courts.

The bonds of companies shared with the stocks in the advance. This movement had failed of sympathetic effect on the general list, which was inclined to sag. The selling was moderate, there being no important demonstration to offset it.

Copper securities suffered from some positive depression to account for the continued decline in the price of metal. A special explanation advanced today for that decline was the resale from China of some speculative holdings of copper bought previously.

Discouragement was perceptible over the iron and steel outlook, and rumors were reiterated of an intended cut in prices as soon as financial conditions promise resources to the railroads to renew purchases of materials.

The announcement of the intended sale of $20,000,000 out of a $50,000,000 issue of bonds to be authorized by the stockholders of the Delaware and Hudson to fund other indebtedness was regarded as an expression of confidence in the early improvement of the investment situation.

The accumulation of the banking surplus explains the increasing ease of the money market and a further advance in sterling exchange rates today showed the resulting tendency to remit to foreign money markets.

The March agricultural exports fall over $17,000,000 below the value of those of March last year, owing to the heavy shrinkage in cotton exports last month, marking a reversal of the large expansion of exports in each month since last fall's financial crisis [illegible] our commodities to market with a rush. Explanation of the rising tendency of foreign exchange rates is found in this showing.

Some of the speculative bond issues made buoyant advances, but the bond division otherwise was dull and steady. Total sales, par value, $2,500,00.

United States 2's registered have declined 1-8 per cent on call during the week.

WHEAT SHOWS GAIN

PRICE OF MAY DELIVERY ADVANCES ONE CENT.

Unrelieved Drouth in Nebraska and Western Kansas, Chief Influence. Corn and Oats Higher.

CHICAGO, April 11.—Unrelieved drouth in Nebraska and western Kansas caused a further advance in wheat prices on the local exchange today, the May delivery closing at a net gain of 7-8@1c; corn was 1-2@5-8c higher; oats were up 1-8c; provisions were 2 1-2@7 1-2c higher. May wheat opened 1-4 to 3-8 to 1@1-8 higher at 91 1-2@92 1-4, advanced to 93 1-4 and closed at 93 1-8.

May corn opened 1-8@1-4 to 1-4c higher at 67 1-2@5-8 to 67 5-8, advanced to 68 3-8 and closed at 67 7-8@68.

May oats opened unchanged at 53 1-2, advanced to 53 7-8 and closed at 53 5-8. Provisions were firm because of the strength of grain and because of a 5c advance in live hogs. Trade was of small proportions. At the close May pork was up 7 1-2c at $13.42 1-2; lard was 2 1-2c higher at $8.57 1-2; ribs were 2 1-2c@5c higher at $7.20@$7.22 1-2.

WOMAN'S STRENGTH.

The strength of women lies in their hearts. It shows itself in their strong love and instinctive perception of right and wrong. Intellectual courage is rarely one of their virtues. As a rule they are inclined to be restless and excitable, allowing their judgments and actions to be swayed by quick emotions of all kinds, but, above all, it is in their hopefulness and endurance that they find their chief power. Who is the last person to give up hope in the case of a member of the family who has apparently gone altogether to the bad? What mother or sister with deep and ardent love for such will ever cease to cherish hope or endure suffering on their account? The patience lives are bound up in their affection. Few people will deny that love in one form or another makes up the beauty of life to woman. It enters into all she does. Any work outside her immediate circle is undertaken most often from pure desire to help some one else to know something of the mysterious happiness of love. Unlike men, women chiefly look for personal intercourse with those for whom they are working. If their interest lies among [illegible] are [illegible] of sympathetic personal acquaintance with them, and very little good work of a lasting kind has been done by women without their own influence of love being brought to bear on the individual [illegible]
